Farm And Home Scholarships Offer Tickets To Success

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A scholarship for Adriana Galijasevic is a passport to a dream come true from a journey begun while growing up in war-torn Bosnia.

To survive the horrors of killing, of hearing that her parents were dead, and of being responsible for a brother seven years younger, Adriana poured herself into her studies and art to ease the pain.

"Only when I was drawing could I escape from everything," the 18-year-old said of her traumatic life between the ages of 12 to 14 years.

With Adriana, seven other students also received $1,400 each from the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation, Tuesday evening. While their stories aren't as dramatic as Adriana's, the scholarships are a testimony to their achievements and a ticket to a successful career.

College costs are out of reach for many students. Reports reveal that costs have risen 91 percent for private colleges and 82 percent for public institutions within the past 10 years.

Many promising students cannot fulfill their potential without scholarships. Traditionally, the Farm and Home scholarships are among the first to be awarded, and the recipients of these are eagerly awaiting notification of additional awards.

Students selected for the Farm and Home Foundation Scholarships, which from its installment has awarded 376 students totalling $297,300, must be county high school seniors pursuing a degree in an ag-related or consumer science field.

After graduation from Hempfield High School, Adriana plans to study fashion design at Drexel University. "When I was little, I cut out paper dolls and dresses, then I

In the final week of her reign as Berks County Dairy Princess Erica Davis, 18, is shown with Macey, a 6-year-old Excellent-92-2E registered Holstein. With Erica are her parents, Luther and Teresa Davis, and siblings, Gregory, 15; Aaron, 9; and Jillian, 5. Mild Winter, Wet Spring Challenges Crop Protection Strategies

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Weeks of wet weather and inches of excessive rainfall following a very mild winter have combined to challenge pest control strategies of farmers throughout the southeastern and southcentral regions of Pennsylvania.

Some weeds began appearing in fields in January during a very mild spell, and a warm and wet late winter and early spring helped boost the growth of weeds and insects beyond normal.

This is not conjecture.

Growing degree days are a measure of duration of temperatures above a threshold for plant or insect growth.

A formula is used to calculate the degree days, but essentially, the numbers reflect the amount of growing energy available to a species over time.

For most agricultural uses, 50 degrees is considered the threshold. When temperatures get above 50 degrees, start counting. (Of course ground temperatures and sunlight also are key to plant growth and are incorporated in growing degree day keeping.)

On Monday, Lebanon County Extension Agronomy Agent Delbert Voight reported that, as of May 17, the Lebanon area accumulated about 523 heat units, compared to 354 last year.

That difference translates into about 16 days accumulation ahead of schedule.

From his perspective, delays in

Chester Conservation District Celebrates 50th

Conservation Farmer Of Year Understands Season's Challenges

ANDY ANDREWS

ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — An early flush of weeds, brought on by early unseasonably warm weather, plenty of rain, and a hot spring, can create severe challenges for crop growers.

Late last week, Bill Beam, who manages about 1,700 acres of cropland within a 15-mile stretch from Elverson to Downingtown, was out with the 60-foot spray wagon, spreading Roundup.

Bill Beam has directed a strong no-till program on conserved land. He was honored Thursday evening with the Conservation Farmer of the Year Award at a special ceremony honoring those who have served the district. Photo by Andy Andrews

The list of troublesome, noxious weeds can make the "weeds of dishonor" on any crop producer's list: Canada thistle, dandelions, wild onion, and foxtail and other grasses. Beam decided to bring out the spray boom and take care of the problem first — all the while hoping it would stay dry long enough to finish corn and soybean planting.

Beam noted that most land he manages is under lease — he owns only a share of the home farm. The Chester County farmer uses mostly no-till methods to ensure soil retention. On one farm owned by Jim and Bill Moore, Elverson, and leased by Beam, contours were designed by the old Soil Conservation Service (now called the Natural Resources Conservation Service) and have been no-tilled for the past four years.

Beam ignores the Canada thistle making a strong push in the field that is being rotated into Roundup Ready soybeans. Beam is anxious to complete planting of 70 acres of beans.

Weeds aren't the only challenge. There is the problem of deer damage — and deer certainly enjoy soybeans. And to top it off, geese that inhabit the Marsh Creek area, which borders farmland south of Elverson, pull out the plants and eat the wheat and small grains.

Despite all these challenges, Beam has directed a strong no-till program that takes more management, that involves a lot more anti-

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids closed higher mid-week, supported by hot, dry conditions across the Western Corn Belt and Southwest areas. Some over- night export sa? of wheat and corn also offered strength to bids. Wheat mostly 2 to 4 cents higher. Corn 2 to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 3 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 5 cents higher. Winds, hot t?and al?dy dry conditions have traders con- cerned over crop conditions. Corn planting nearly finished and soybeans are around 50 percent complete. Forecasts call for a small chance for rain but the moisture that has fallen has been spotty. The Southeast US continues to be very dry. Winter wheat harvest has moved into South- ern Oklahoma.

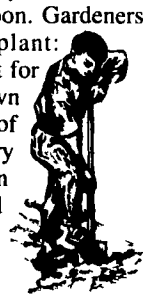
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MAY 25-31, 1998

NEW MOON, MAY 25.

OLD MEMORIES, NEW MOON

Memorial Day (observed May 25 this year) is the day we formally remember departed family and friends, and also the date of May's new Moon. Gardeners use both to help determine when to plant: Memorial Day is the cautious cutoff point for late frosts, and the new Moon offers its own weather lore. It's said that if the crescent of the Moon holds water, we will have a dry spell. Likewise, if the old Moon is seen in the arms of the new (i.e., you see the full disk faintly outlined by the illuminated crescent), a storm is coming. A new Moon on its back indicates wind.



Thy light can visionary thoughts impart, And lead the Muse to soothe a suffering heart.

– Helen M Williams "Sonnet to the Moon"

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Instead of geraniums for memorial plots, consider the fragrant rosemary — it signifies "for remembrance."

GRILLED ROSEMARY LAMB

2 pounds boneless lamb
1/2 cup olive oil
1/3 cup balsamic vinegar
3 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons chopped fresh rosemary, plus extra sprigs for the grill
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 large yellow onions
2 green bell peppers

Cut lamb into 1-inch pieces Mix oil, vinegar, garlic, chopped rosemary, and salt, add lamb and refrigerate for up to 8 hours When ready to grill, bring lamb to room temperature Cut onions and peppers into chunks and skewer, alternating with the lamb. When coals are hot, dampen extra rosemary sprigs and toss on fire Grill skewers over coals, brushing with marinade and turning until done, about 8 to 10 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

St. Urban (May 25) was once considered the inauguration of summer.

If it rains on St. Philip's Day (May 26), the poor will not need help from the rich.

Married when bees over May blossoms flit, strangers around your board will sit.

A lot of foam on a river foretells rain.

OPINION

Don't Forget To Write

From the 1980s through the mid 1990s, one common theme has emanated from the advice of experts representing the entire, broad field of agriculture — expect rapid change.

They were not wrong.

Change has proven to be more than rapid and all-encompassing. It has proven to be overwhelming.

It's easy to get lost and get a feeling of being left out and behind.

What the experts forgot to provide was advice on how to handle all the change.

Keep abreast of change in the news? Forget it.

With so much change and commentary on change, it's next to impossible to determine the significance of the change; or if anything has changed at all, really.

From the Internet and e-mail conversational ramblings, to organizations with purposefully misleading names getting their politically twisted takes published in otherwise respected sources of news, to televised "infomercials," who can sift through it?

While the wide "world" of opinions can be reached more rapidly and completely with modern technology, it doesn't mean there is any more value to those opinions.

Perhaps there is even less value than before, because almost invisible are the previous standards used to differentiate between information provided through disciplined research and objective study, and that merely intended to be persuasive and motivate the masses to purchase goods, services and ideas.

What many have acknowledged is the need for some sort of screening device; something to sift through the chaff.

There is no magical solution, but there is something that can really help — a daily or weekly diary.

No, that isn't a typographical error of the word, "dairy," though that error happens frequently enough in all agricultural publications.

A diary doesn't have to be some secretive book of inner thoughts. It only has to be a regular part of the routine, recording notes of what is important to the diary keeper.

Things that may get recorded could include notes about trees that had fallen on a fence, a cow showing heat, a sighting of a raccoon during the day, the temperature, a neighbor helping out or needing help, the weather, the paint peeling from the eaves, spare parts purchased on a run into town, a visit from a relative, an ususual animal sighting, birthdays, etc.

For a reflective, self-management tool, the daily diary would be difficult to replace. It could be kept side-by-side with a daily planner, or incorporated.

A diary serves as a reminder of how life really is for the diary keeper.

Through review of the diary, the keeper can discover the things that really make a difference, and be able to dispense with the daily hype of horror in other places, between waring factions, bad domestic relationships, etc.

This is not head-hiding in the sand. It is recording notes of what was important that day, without being told later on by someone else.

A daily diary is healthy, because it builds a personal history from which true perspective on happiness and values can be remembered and assessed.

This is not self-delusionment. It is documenting real life.

Most newspapers were founded as fulfilling a role in serving to provide a public record of events. That is community history.

A diary contains news to provide a personal record of events. That is a personal history.

A personal history may be more important to keep now than ever before, because it can be used to separate the quieter sounds of real life from the high volume screams for attention by a money hungry, marketing-mad outside world.

It also provides something else that can be considered essential to good mental health — a healthy perspective.

As every public servant who deals constantly with the negatives of life (law enforcement agents, children and youth social workers, prison guards, etc.), too much knowledge of just bad things can get depressing and pervert perspective, because it can create the illusion that all people are bad and evil.

With fewer people knowing their next door neighbor, and more people being more familiar with the events and ideas of "celebrities," it's no wonder that perspective can become easily lost.

Amidst a kaleidoscopic, daily whorl of superfluous information, a diary can be a best friend in finding the way back home.

To Think Safety

Hay harvest is here. The good quality bumper crop many farmers are harvesting this spring can be overshadowed by a farm accident.

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, many farm accidents are associated with harvesting a crop. Following a few safety guidelines should help make the harvest season a safe and enjoyable one.

Operate and maintain harvest equipment as directed in the owner's manual. Keep shields in place during operation. Shut off the power before unclogging, adjusting, or servicing equipment. Adjust ground speed to field conditions.

Keep children and non workers off machinery – no second riders. Operate elevators and forage blowers with care. Keep hands and feet out of the hopper when the equipment is operating. Check the tires, hitches, lighting, slow moving vehicle emblem, and brakes before starting and keep children away from all equipment at all times.

To Avoid Hot Hay

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, reminds us that baling hay that is too green could result in a fire, which could burn down the hay storage facility. This is a result of spontaneous combustion caused by storing hay that is too wet.

Hay should not be stored until the moisture content reaches 20 percent or less. At high moisture levels, there is a greater risk of fire.

In addition, hay which is baled above that moisture level has a high risk of becoming moldy and dusty.

Haylage, on the other hand should be put into storage before the moisture content drops below 50 percent. Depending on storage structure, haylage is best preserved for feed when it is between 50 and 60 percent moisture. Haylage with a moisture content of 45 percent moisture poses a significant risk for fire.

To Monitor Stored Hay

To be safe from fires, inspect hay mows at least twice a week during the harvest season. Check for hot spots for their exact temperatures using a thermometer.

If hay temperatures reach 150 degrees, there is a danger of fire and a daily monitoring of hay temperature is recommended. If temperatures reach 160 degrees, monitoring should be at 4-hour intervals.

Fire pockets may be expected if the temperature of the hay reaches 175 degrees. You should notify the local fire department to be on standby and ready to remove hay. If the temperature reaches 185 degrees, have the fire company on hand to put out fires which may erupt as the hay is taken out of storage. At 210 degrees, hay is certain to ignite.

Even with these safety precautions, fire may start and barns burn to the ground. Do not wait until it is too late to call for help. You may also want to check with your insurance company to see what type of coverage you have.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE SECRET WAY TO FIRST PLACE

May 24, 1998

Background Scripture:
Mark 9:33-37, 10:35-45

Devotional Reading:
John 13:3-17

Put yourself in the disciples' sandals! In the company of Jesus they had been walking on the road to Capernaum, talking as they walked. Apparently, because they were in a group they did not think that Jesus could hear them. But, when they got to their destination, Jesus turned to them and asked, "What were you discussing on the way?" (Mk. 9:33).

Ouch! Suppose Jesus were to listen in on all your conversations? Or read the thoughts that remain unspoken in your mind? That would be very compromising, wouldn't it? But what makes you think that he does not hear your words and read your thoughts? Jesus knew his disciples and he knows us too— the good, the bad and the in-between. Mark tells us simply: "But they were silent; for on the way they had discussed with one another who was the greatest" (v. 35).

I can't think of a teaching of Jesus with which we have a harder time than what he said on this question of who is the greatest? Our only consolation is in realizing that the disciples had the same problem. They already knew that Jesus thought on this problem. If that were not so, they would not have remained silent. Perhaps he had not said it in exactly this way, "If any one would be first, he must be last of all and servant of all" (9:35), but I don't think his position was really unknown to them. He had demonstrated it in his own actions.

OUR PROBLEM, TOO

Their problem was exactly what our problem is. It wasn't that they did not know where he stood, but that they did Neither was it that they did not understand him, but that they did and simply did not like what they understood. Jesus was not just asking them to make some slight modifications of their behavior, but to see life and themselves in a totally different way.

It is interesting that these words of Jesus did not settle the matter for the disciples. Later, in Mark 10:35-45, the same question would arise again. This time it was specifically James and John, the sons of Zebedee, who brought the question to Jesus. Should we assume that they had not been present on that other occasion? Not necessarily: just think how many times you have heard Jesus speak on this subject and yet have not put it fully into practice!

This time the question was right out in the open. "Teacher," said James and John, "we want you to do for us whatever we ask of you" (10:35). You and I cringe when we read this statement; it is so baldly presumptuous to think that anyone would ask Jesus to "do for us whatever we ask of you!" But was their request any more presumptuous than those we carry to him?

ARE YOU ABLE?

We cringe to hear them ask, "Grant us to sit, one at your right hand and one at your left, in your glory." But notice how calmly Jesus responds to this outrageous request: "You do not know what you are asking. Are you able to drink the cup that I drink, or to be baptized with the baptism with which I am to be baptized?"

In their blissful ignorance, they give him the same kind of answer we often give him: "We are able." They didn't have a clue what it meant, but then often neither do we. The other disciples did not know either, for they interpreted it as a matter of status: "And when the ten heard it, they began to be indignant at James and John" (10:41)

Once more Jesus answers in a manner that should not have left any room for error in understanding: "... whoever would be great among you must be your servant, and whoever would be first among you must be slave of all." (10:44, 45)

Now, have you got that?

DIRECT RETAIL
Farm Marketing

Fruits And Vegetables

This is the second in what is to be a regularly appearing column about direct retail marketing, made available through the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association Inc. (PRFMA Inc.) and Penn State Cooperative Extension, and the state Department of Agriculture.

The first column was published in the May 16 issue of Lancaster Farming. Since then, Jeff Patton, direct marketing facilitator for the Pa. Department of Agriculture, has offered to be a regular contributor specializing more with fruits and vegetables. This is his first column.

For more information about the PRFMA, call its Executive Secretary John Berry, who is also the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension and regional Penn State Cooperative Extension marketing agent. To join the organization, contact Berry at PRFMA, Lehigh County Cooperative Extension, 4184 Dorney Park Road, Allentown, PA 18104-5798, or (610) 391-9840, or e-mail at jwb15 at psu.edu.

Selling fresh produce directly to consumers offers challenges and opportunities which differ from wholesale producers.

The degree of success you enjoy depends upon your creativity and inventiveness, in addition to hard work.

Through this column, I will attempt to offer suggestions which you can adapt to your operation, no matter how large or small.

There are many highly successful, proven strategies which may make a difference to your competitiveness.

Each month I will include my address and phone number so that you can contact me with ideas, suggestions, questions and comments.

For comments or suggestions, contact Jeff Patton, Direct Marketing Facilitator, P.O. Box 68, Hereford, PA 18056; or call (610) 845-7423; fax (610) 845-2955; or e-mail: jpat987 at erols.com.

Advertise With Brevity

Consumer's time is valuable. They will respond best with simple advertising that can impress within three seconds.

Make "stunning clarity" your official advertising policy.

When designing newspaper display ads, roadside signs, business cards and brochures, balance attractive graphic images with the effective use of words.

Illustrate a signle produce items instead of a cornucopia.

Redo your farm market logo to make it eye-catching.

Consider using flyer cards (3.5 inches by 8.5 inches) instead of a brochure, when you need a detailed handout.

Be sure to include strategic information, such as hours of operation, specific location, exact time of picking, variety names for produce, etc.

A double-sided or folding business card may be effective and offers more space for vital information, including a map, or a chart about produce availability.

You may need to use the services of a professional artist or photographer, but the results will be worth the cost.

The "stunning clarity" policy may cost more, but it will capture consumers' attentions.

Rekindling Interest

Reopen those seed catalogues.

Vegetable growers can take the lead in rekindling a produce item that seems to have lost its appeal to consumers.

Sales of vegetables like eggplant may need some stimulation by selecting more interesting varieties and offering new cooking ideas.

Agriculture Groups Call For Action To Bolster Farm Safety Net

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association and 11 other agricultural organizations sent a letter to House and Senate leaders calling for Congress to take specific actions to boost agricultural exports and support farm income.

The letter cited the need to follow through on Congressional assurances made at the time the Federal Agriculture Improve-ment and Reform (FAIR) Act was enacted in 1996. Under FAIR, farmers agreed to accept reductions in income support payments based on government pledges to provide "safety net" policies to improve global competitiveness, enhance risk management, and expand agricultural research.

"In our view, it is essential for the administration and the Congress to recommit their support for basic programs that will ensure the viability and competitiveness of U.S. agriculture over the short and long terms," stated the letter signed by the American Soybean Association, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Association of Wheat Growers, National Barley Growers Association, National Cattleman's Beef Association, National Corn Growers Association, National Cotton Council of America, National Grain Sorghum Producers Association, National Grange, National Oilseed Processors Association, National Pork Producers Council and National Sunflower Association.

Specific areas of concern identified in the letter include deterioration in support of U.S. agricultural trade policy, reduced government support for export assistance and promotion programs, and delay in providing adequate funding for the federal crop insurance program The letter also cited the inability of Congress and the administration to agree on agricultural spending priorities, including national agricultural research initiatives.

The groups urged the following actions to address these concerns:

1. Fast Track negotiating authority must be actively sought by the administration and approved by Congress;

2. Legislation to provide $18 billion to replenish the International Monetary Fund should be immediately passed by the Congress;

3. The administration and Congress should modify U.S. sanctions policy to allow greater flexibility for food exports to restricted countries, including Iran and Cuba;

4. The administration should commit to seek agreement to end unfair trade practices in the next round of multilateral trade negotiations.

5. Congress should appropriate $35 million for the Foreign Market Development program to allow continued operation at the current level;

6. Congress should restore funding to allow the Market Access Program to operate at its current level of $90 million;

7. The administration should immediately expand the Supplier Credit Guarantee Program under GSM-102 and -103, and increase the amount of risk covered under the program to 85 percent from the current level of 50 percent. The GSM-5 Direct Credit Sales Program should be reactivated;

8. Budget baselines equal to annual outlays permitted by the WTO should be provided for the Export Enhancement Program. EEP should be used to combat unfair trade practices, or unused funds should be shifted to other WTO-legal export programs.

9. Congress should immediately pass the Conference Report on the Research Title of the FAIR Act (S. 1150) providing $470 million for delivery of federal crop insurance and $600 million for national agricultural research objectives;

10. Income averaging for farmers and ranchers and full deductibility of health insurance premiums should be made permanent in the next tax bill;

11. Farm and Ranch Risk Management (FARRM) accounts should be authorized in the next tax bill

4-H Program Offers Biotechnology Curriculum

CHEVY CHASE, Md. – An innovative curriculum to boost student enthusiasm and interest in the burgeoning field of biotechnology has been launched through a partnership involving National 4-H Council, Monsanto Corporation, and Pioneer Hi-Bred International.

The new curriculum, called "Fields of Genes, Making Sense of Biotechnology," is intended for students in Kindergarten through the 12th grade.

The 96-page leaders' guide is designed to help elementary and high school teachers provide their students with a basic understanding to the biotechnology field today as well as its future direction.

"We are concerned about continuing and recent reports which show that only a small percentage of Americans have a grasp of basic scientific ideas," said Dick Sauer, president and CEO of National 4-H Council.

"We hope this new curriculum will help make science and agriculture come alive for youngsters across the country. Programs such as Fields of Genes can help American students become more 'science literate,' while also allowing them to better understand the impact of science on the food that they eat and the world in which they live.'

"Biotechnology is now an accepted part of agriculture in the United States, and gradually is being adopted by farmers in other parts of the world, because it provides wonderful tools to help feed a growing world population better food grown in a more sustainable way," said Arnold W. Donald, senior vice president, Monsanto Corporation.

"Any new technology, no matter how valuable, requires understanding before it can be used appropriately and to the full benefit of everyone. The students of today are the food producers and consumers of the future, so it is important that they understand this technology, and Fields of Genes, we believe, is a great vehicle to further that understanding."

John Soper, Ph.D., director of Sunflower Research at Pioneer Hi-Bred International, said "Biotechnology offers tremendous potential for improving the productivity of the world's agricultural producers as we move into the next millennium.

"As with many new technologies, the scientific fundamentals of biotechnology are poorly understood by many and a number of complex issues have arisen from its use. Fields of Genes explores basic scientific principles which form the foundation of biotechnology." It is our hope that Fields of Genes will equip students with an adequate scientific foundation to make better informed decisions as they deal with emerging issues regarding the use of biotechnology."

The new curriculum teaches students about the wonders and complexity of life, from the smallest one-celled protozoan to the multi-billion-celled human, in the context of agriculture and biotechnology.

Curriculum activities for students in the primary grades focus on understanding the living and nonliving parts of their world. Fields of Genes exercises help children begin to develop the knowledge base on which they will build values, skills and actions.

Middle school children continue to explore and understand genetics, biotechnology, and genetic engineering, while high schoolers are encouraged through exercises in Fields of Genes to plan environmental stewardship activities related to biotechnology and the environment.

Each chapter of Fields of Genes contains information and activities about different aspects of biotechnology, from focusing on habitats and organisms' requirements for life to applications of biotechnology and genetic engineering. Each chapter contains background information for leaders and each activity contains how-to information, such as materials needed, and time involved to complete the project.

Other aspects of the Fields of Genes curriculum include recommendations on how to adapt activities for older/younger children, relevant project ideas suitable for science, county and state fairs and groups discussion topic recommendations.

The curriculum was produced by National 4-H Council's Environmental Stewardship program, which encourages youth to make a commitment to use natural resources responsibly for the sake of their communities and the world around them.

Reporters wishing to receive a complimentary copy of Fields of Genes, Making Sense of Biotechnology, should call 301-961-2833.

The public can order copies by calling National 4-H Supply Service at 301-961-2934 and asking for product number ES0046.

The cost is $5 plus shipping and handling. Orders may also be placed by fax at 301-961-2937.

National 4-H Council is a non-profit organization that partners with 4-H, the Cooperative Extension System, and other organizations to pursue its vision and accomplish its mission... to realize the transformational power of youth and adults learning together to address life's critical challenges, and implement its strategies.

National 4-H Council provides hands-on, co-educational programs and activities that involve youth as partners, establish youth as resources in their communities, and provide leadership training and experience to ensure their success. More than 5.6 million youth, ages five to nineteen participate in the 4-H program nationwide.

Dairy Farmers Can Do Something About The Weather

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — More than 400 years ago, the great Spanish author Cervantes observed in his timeless novel, Don Quixote, that, "To be prepared is half the victory."

Dairy farmers who escaped the devastating ice storms and electrical power failures that hit New England and eastern Canada last winter ought to take Cervantes' words seriously, according to Cooperative Extension specialists at the University of Maryland.

As a producer, you should disprove American author Mark Twain's observation that, "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it."

What you need, says Lee Grant, Extension specialist in agricultural engineering, is a generator for emergency standby power — available on short notice — that won't break down under continuous usage for long periods.

The generator may be a self-contained stationery model, or more likely it'll be run by your tractor's power take-off (PTO).

Dr. Grant recommends testing your generator once a month — or every six months at the very least — to make sure it is ready to go when needed.

He also advises that you hire a qualified electrician to install a proper-sized transfer switch in or near your milking parlor to isolate your generator from the incoming utility line. (See illustration).

Store your generator in a clean, dry place with other power equipment — not in the rear of a dirt-floor shed.

Before starting a periodic test, clean out all vents and other openings in the generator; lubricate; check and/or change gearbox oil; inspect for rodent damage, food and nests. Rotate slowly by hand to make sure there is no hindrance to smooth operation.

Run the test with heaters and lights on, because they draw a constant electrical load (amperage).

Check nameplate for voltage capacity.

If your generator is rated at 40,000 watts (40 KW), it can stand a load of 80,000 watts for a few seconds. This would be the surge necessary for the generator to get a milking machine motor started.

Make the test run at full load for at least 25 minutes; one hour would even be better. When you shut your generator down — after disconnecting the power — let it idle for a few seconds to blow out the heat.

What if you don't have a generator on your farm and can't afford to buy one?

The Maryland Cooperative Extension specialist suggests checking with the administrators of local disaster plans to see if those plans include provisions for loaning generators to dairy farms. Nearby military bases or National Guard armories could be another loan source of generators for emergency use.

How Often To Milk Cows?

In emergency situations when a standby generator is your only power source and milk haulers are not able to reach your farm, it's tempting to milk your cows only once a day.

Is this a good idea?

Not according to Bob Peters, Extension dairy specialist at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Peters notes that milk production can drop significantly when cows are milked only once a day, instead of twice daily. And any cow with a history of mastitis is likely to have the problem flare up when she is not on regular twice-a-day milking.

A 1992 study with Friesian and Jersey cows at the Ruakura AGricultural Research Centre at Hamilton, New Zealand, showed that cows milked only once a day produced 10-28 percent less milk and milk solids in early to mid-lactation than cows milked twice a day.

The loss was only slightly less for cows in late lactation.

"From the standpoint of maintaining herd production and keeping udders healthy," the Maryland Cooperative Extension specialist conclude, "twice-a-day milking is worthwhile — even if you have to dump your milk for a few days."

Mild Winter, Wet Spring Challenges Crop Protection Strategies

corn planting may have already cost some bushel yield for some. He said May 10 probably should have been the cutoff, but that was not a possibility for many.

It really wasn't until this week that many fields were dry enough to drive into with a tractor without being very seriously concerned about compaction.

Other than compaction, working a too-wet field can result in long term crop losses for other reasons.

In some cases, Voight pointed out that some soil was obviously too wet when corn was planted, and the ground covering the seed didn't close or hold closed behind the seeding disc.

But insects and weeds have grown tremendously quickly. In some cases, no-till corn fields have been covered with almost a foot-thick mat of the winter annual chickweed, and stands of thistle have grown to 2 feet.

Voight said farmers should consider rethinking some of their planting decisions, and maybe even seed choices.

Herbicidal choices and application strategies should most likely be modified also.

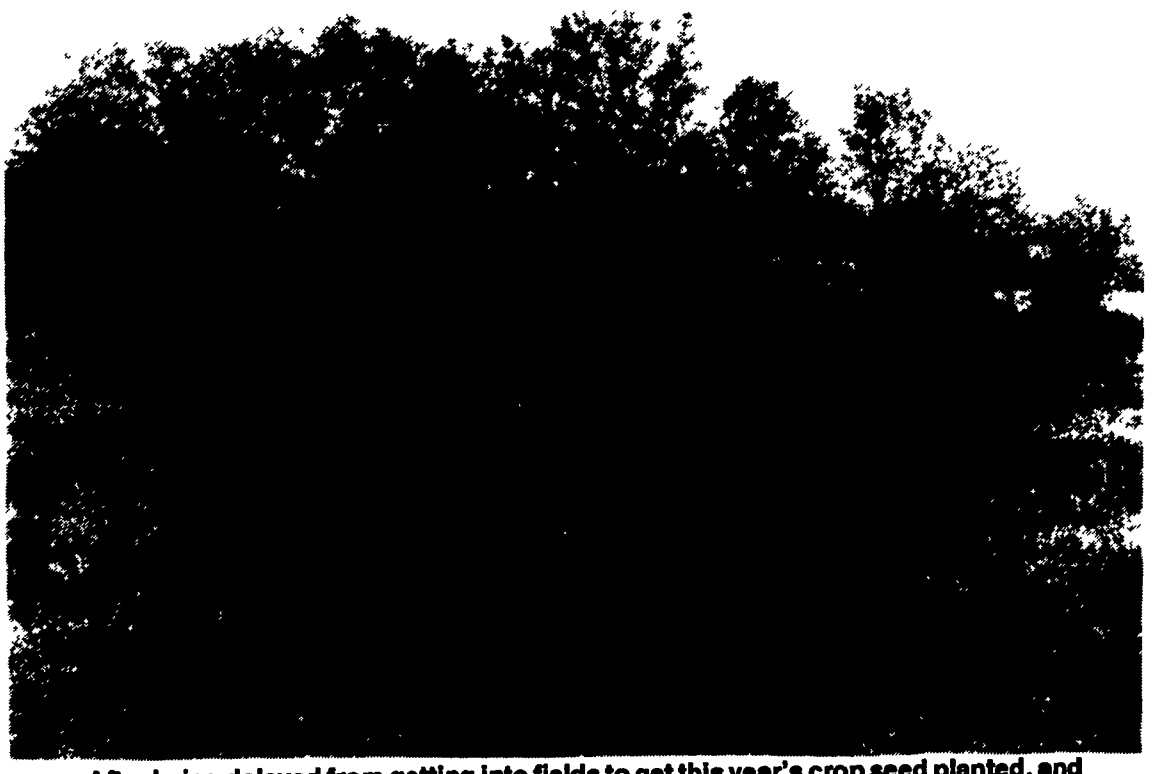
On the other hand, some look at the situation as not so bad.

One farmer who has been battling encroaching burcucumber, said that the situation presents another opportunity to put a dent in the reproduction of the corn-strangling weed.

Lebanon County Extension Agronomy Agent Delbert Voight kneels in a no-till corn field overrun with weeds. Next to him is part of a patch of thistle, and the pennycress, part of the mustard family, is highlighted in front, while a lot of the ground cover is a thick mat of chickweed.

A member of the Composite Family? Regardless, it's but one of a variety of weeds — any unintended plant — that have been so far able to escape control measures in some crop fields because of wet weather delays and advanced growing degree day accumulation.

Jimsonweed has been a problem weed for some time, but especially in some regions. A poisonous plant, Lebanon County Extension Agent Delbert Voight shows three aspects of the plant worth noting: the decaying, yet still prickly seed case from last year's adult; the small, dark, irregularly shaped seed on his finger, and the young sprout.



After being delayed from getting into fields to get this year's crop seed planted, and with weeds getting started as early as January in some cases, this no-till field will have plenty of surface residue once the weeds are "burned" down. That can help greatly should dry weather occur later in the summer.

He said that last year's wet spring and early growth of weeds allowed him to kill and plow the weeds down before they went to seed, and he was able to plant his corn.

The corn got started well, but while a late summer drought hurt the corn crop for many throughout the state, this particular farmer has some low lying fields that retain soil moisture.

The corn was able to tap into that, while any further germination of burcucumber was left to wilt before going to seed.

He said the current weather patterns and delayed field work may well work to his continuing advantage against burcucumber, by being able to kill off the emerged weeds and planting soon.

Instead of just thinking about the type of herbicides to order, the farmer is using an Integrated Pest Management-type strategy — understand the life cycle of pests, and then discover windows of opportunity to disrupt those life cycles, while at the same time getting field work done and the crop planted and growing.

Dr. William Curran, a weed expert and researcher with Penn State University Agronomy Department who also conducts weed research at the Penn State Southeast Research Farm in Landisville (Lancaster County), said he sees a number of different weed-control scenarios resulting from the weather so far.

However, he said that farmers should not be discouraged from these early challenges.

"Keep in mind we different situations every year, and, three or four days from now, things could be on a more positive note," he said. "So, remain optimistic, it's early in the season yet."

Curran said of the situations he's been observing, the rain has been a common factor.

"One of the main things I'm seeing, the guys who got their corn planted early and got all that rain, we're going to see the preemergence pesticide wear out."

He said that with rainfall coming in 3- to 4-inch doses, that the preemergent herbicides "probably leached below the weed germination zone, in some cases.

"Of course, some of the guys who planted didn't get (back into fields to spray the preemergent crop protection), and are now dealing with big weeds as big or bigger than corn. For no-till it's worse off.

(Turn to Page A23)

Mild Winter, Wet Spring Challenges Crop Protection Strategies

If the weeds are 10- to 12-inches tall, (the situation calls for) maybe even starting over again," he said.

He said that on tilled ground where the weeds aren't that big, the herbicide program should include some things like Accent or Basis Gold. "They are going to be pretty widely used in corn this year, it looks like to me," he said.

The reason for Accent (contained in Basis Gold), he said, is that it is the only herbicide that can be widely used for grass control on corn, unless, of course, the corn is one of the new genetically enhanced varieties that are herbicide resistant.

However the specialty seed availability is restricted, and expense is greater.

Curran said he knows that the situation is presenting some problems for those farmers who had already prepared to plant with longer maturing varieties with a specific herbicide, but were delayed because of the rains.

"Now they're going to have to get something more appropriate. It's a problem for the farmer, and the commercial dealer," he said.

Grasses, Curran said, are the biggest concern. "Once foxtail in particular gets more than 6 inches tall, it becomes very difficult to kill.

"Another thing that happens when grass gets that big and hasn't been killed. It starts to compete with the corn pretty fiercely and starts taking up nitrogen, and you can see nitrogen deficiencies in small corn."

He said the taletell signs of nitrogen deficiency are yellowing and browning of the lower leaves on the corn.

He said that sidedressing is an option and one that he's certain some will employ, though he said he's not sure if the benefit outweighs starting over in that field or plot.

"A lot of times, I think corn can never really recover from the early season competition. You set it back and it seems to never completely pull out, the root system is not as deep."

He said on Thursday that at the Landisville research farm, rain has not fallen for nine days, and for those who planted this week, and for those who applied herbicides, ironically rain in the near future is essential.

He said that at the Penn State research farm at Rockspring (where the Penn State Ag Progress Days are held), the staff had just finished planting corn. He said they started Saturday and finished Wednesday.

Likewise he said he knows that corn planting activity has been high around the state this week.

"A lot of corn has gone in, in the last week, and a lot of preemergent herbicide sprayed."

Curran said that without some rain in the next couple of days, the efficacy of the herbicide may be broken down too far, or not reached the critical weed seed germination zone in the soil.

The preemergent herbicide is sprayed after planting corn so that it kills the faster growing and already germinating weed seeds and then is out of the way by the time the corn germinates.

"With (preemergent herbicides) like Prowl, within seven days of no rain, you are losing some because of photodegradation, and some volatizes, and then weeds start to germinate and there's no rainfall to move the herbicide into the weed germination zone."

From his field observations this week, Voight said that the cutworm may be a serious problem this year in corn fields with heavy infestations of chickweed.

The moth of the cutworm, a migratory insect, lays eggs in the chickweed and the larva (the gray-greenish "worm") feed on the chickweed.

After the chickweed is destroyed — either turned under, sprayed with some product such as Roundup, or both — and the corn is planted and emerges, the cutworm can destroy acres of corn to the point of requiring a replanting or change of crop.

There are several products that can be used against cutworm, though Curran said that even though this is the time of the year to be hearing of cutworm problems, he hasn't heard of much cutworm activity and isn't sure why.

But all in all, those who employ the services of crop consultants and custom operators probably have received good advice on changing strategies.

Pennsylvania law requires those who apply pesticides (other than for home and garden use) to be certified by the state Department of Agriculture and to maintain continuing education credits to maintain certification. Many should already be aware of some need for a strategic change.

Winter annuals and perrenials are the weeds infesting most fields now, but summer annuals have started and bienniels, such as Common Mullein, are growing well.

In one field Voight visited this week, the acreage was a cornucopia of problem weeds for Lebanon County.

A virtual garden of varieties, Voight stood among various thistles, groundcherry, some other nightshades, staghorn sumac, pepperweed, chickweed, Jimsonweed, lambsquarters, pigweed, etc.

He said, "This is a corn field. It will be planted this week."

But it has long been known that this is the challenge of Pennsylvania agriculture.

The temperate climate, the historic eveness of temperature and moisture, and various geological structures and conditions create a variety of conditions whereby a wide variety of plants can grow and thrive, not to mention agricultural crops.

Whereas, the area may be too humid to achieve one-day dry down of hay for consistent optimum forage quality, it can accomodate a larger variety of plants — including weeds — than many regions of the world.

But weeds aren't the only concern.

Among the insects that plague those with traditional agricultural livestock and vegetable row crops, there are viruses, fungi and bacteria to confront.

The two weeks of rain and overcast weather that recently broke to a high dry pressure system has allowed the resumption of field work.

The weekly report on field activities from the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service relates to farm activity from the previous week.

This week's report reflects an inability to get into fields. Next week's report will undoubtedly contain mention of haying, seed bed preperation and planting activities.

In the meantime, those with questions about their cropping strategies can contact their local Penn State Extension agronomy agent, purchase a current copy of the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences Agronomy Guide, or contact a certified crop consultant.

Workers Nail Trusses In Place At Lebanon Produce Auction

REISTVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — Trusses were delivered Wednesday afternoon and nailed into place by a half-dozen men at the new site of the Lebanon Produce Auction Inc. on land from Amos Stoltzfus here on Reistville Road west of town.

When completed within the next week, the site, totalling 7,200 square feet, is scheduled to begin auctioning produce beginning Tuesday, May 26, at 10 a.m., according to Wilmer Hoover, chairman of the auction. Auctions will be Tuesdays and Fridays and more often as the season progresses.

The construction began before the rains of the past several weeks and started up again early this week, Hoover noted. The site occupies almost five acres on Reistville Road about a half mile west of town. Total cost for land and building is about $225,000, Hoover noted.

The auction warehouse includes 30-foot by 30-foot office space and will have 17 bays. About 20 individuals are involved in the corporation. The sale site will accommodate about 250 growers in the region.

Officers of the corporation include Wilmer Hoover, Elizabethtown, chairman; Elvin Nolt, Richland, treasurer; and Mervin Weiler, Womelsdorf, secretary. Board members include Joe Horning, Myerstown and Russell Wolf, Lebanon.

Hoover noted that the upcoming auction season looks promising. The auction will be the site chosen by people who are used to selling locally and in other areas.

Hoover himself grows about 50 acres of vegetables, including sweet corn, cantaloupe, watermelon, and other crops. For more information, growers can contact Hoover at Elizabethtown, (717) 367-8379.

N.Y., N.J. April Milk $13.50

ALBANY, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied regulated milk dealers (handlers) under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during April 1998 will be paid by handlers on the basis of a uniform price of $13.50 per hundredweight (29 cents per quart).

The price for the corresponding month last year was $12.82 per hundredweight.

Market Administrator Ronald C. Pearce stated that the price was $13.89 in March 1998.

The uniform price is a market-wide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

A total of 10,093 dairy farmers supplied handlers regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders with 1,033,948,727 pounds of milk during April 1998. This was an increase of 5.5 percent (about 54 million pounds) from last year.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $141,947,631.26.

Regulated handlers used 388,207,407 pounds of milk for Class I, 37.5 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks.

For April 1998, handlers paid $15.74 per hundredweight (33.8 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $14.88 a year ago.

Handlers used 151,016,272 pounds of milk for Class II products, 14.6 percent of the total. Class II products include fluid cream, eggnog, ricotta and cottage cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $13.62 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture Class III products including butter, cheese (other than ricotta and cottage cheeses), and whole milk powder totaled 452,574,866 pounds (43.8 percent of the total). Handlers paid $11.92 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk (Class III-A) totaled 42,150,182 (4.1 percent of the total). Handlers paid $12.79 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For April 1998, there was a price differential of 14.2 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received from farms in the 201- to 210-mile zone from New York City.

Chester County Commissioners, Ag Council Honor Individuals

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Late in April the Chester County Commissioners and the County Agricultural Development Council honored three individuals for their outstanding contributions to agriculture.

The Farmer of the Year Award was presented to Ben Beiler and Tim Barlow of Pinta Lane Dairy Farm in Upper Oxford Township. According to Kevin Baer, program coordinator of the County of Chester Agricultural Land Preservation, Beiler and Barlow were selected because of the innovative relationship they have established. Beiler owns Pinta Lane Farm and Barlow owns the farm's dairy herd and maintains the farm's crops and grounds. The partnership was also recognized for its superb conservation work, high quality dairy herd, and superior farm maintenance practices.

Pinta Lane Farm was profiled in the Sept. 13, 1997 issue of Lancaster Farming.

The Distinguished Agricultural Service Award was presented to Robert McRae. McRae serves as coordinator of the Chester County Act 319/515 programs. Through this position and his extensive volunteer activities, McRae has been instrumental in explaining preferential and land use value tax assessment to the Chester County farm community. He also serves on the County Agricultural Land Preservation Board and has been very supportive of pro-agriculture legislation.

Ridge To Present Pa. Trees As Gift To Israeli Children

HARRISBURG, Pa. (Dauphin Co.) — During his May 22-26 trade mission to Israel, Gov. Tom Ridge will present a grove of Pennsylvania-grown trees as a gift from the children of Pennsylvania to the children of Israel.

The governor will join Israeli children in planting a tree near Jerusalem in honor of Israel's 50th anniversary.

"Pennsylvania is blessed with some of the finest hardwoods grown anywhere in the world," Gov. Ridge said. "These trees, harvested from 'Penn's Woods' and re-planted in Israel, will serve as a constant, growing reminder of Pennsylvanias' close bonds with people of Israel."

State Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes unveiled several of the trees to students at the Yeshiva Academy in Harrisburg. Thirty eastern red cedar trees from Musser Forests Inc. in Indiana, Indiana County, are being prepared by the Department of Agriculture for air shipment to Israel early next week. The eastern red cedar is easily transplanted and is indigenous to Pennsylvania and Israel.

Secretary Hayes announced that Yeshiva Academy students have written letters and taped songs for the children in Israel. Gov. Ridge will present those gifts to Israeli children during the tree-planting ceremony.

"These trees, a gift from this generation of Pennsylvania children, will be enjoyed by Israeli children for generations to come," Secretary Hayes said. "It is our hope that Pennsylvania students will develop a friendship with the children in Israel who will actually plant the trees in a grove near Jerusalem."

DIRECT RETAIL Farm Marketing

Many vegetables can earn you more money from consumers who want new types, colors and uses.

For instance, last August, one Lehigh Valley store had standard large Italian eggplants priced at 89 cents per pound, and a baby eggplant (imported from Holland) at $3.98 a pound.

The increased attention to Thai, Japanese, Chinese and Arabic cooking can help boost interest among consumers who like to try new foods and flavors.

When you introduce a new and interesting variety of vegetable, try naming the country of origin and pass on new and interesting ways to prepare it.

Marketing may help you realize more than that 89 cents per pound for eggplant — and for other vegetables.

Internet Site?

Is a site on the Internet for you?

The Internet may offer an effective, new marketing tool for you.

If you have access to the World Wide Web, do a search for "farm markets" to gain ideas which might work for you.

If you decide to create a Homepage, be sure it is easy to use, spare in words and graphics and focused. It could be a great way to offer up-to-date information on seasonal produce and hours of operation. I can also be a tool for offering products by mail.

Before you decide to promote your farm market on the Internet, be sure you can commit the resources to keeping the information current and useful for consumers. It could be a great new marketing tool, if used correctly.

What's New?

The Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association aims to provide education, promotions and advocacy for farmers who sell agriuclural products to consumers. Board members have granted a free membership for 1998 to all direct marketers.

Farmers listed in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's 1997 Consumer's Guide to Farm Markets booklet will receive details.

For more information, contact PRFMA Executive Secretary John Berry.

made clothes for my dolls. When I was young, I'd take my mom's clothes and fit them to myself, and now I make my own clothing," Adriana said.

In Bosnia, Adriana's dad Sead was a professional soccer player and an economist. Her mother Vesna was a famous journalist. When the war broke out, Adriana and her brother were visiting friends and were unable to return home because the battle lines were drawn between the two areas.

"I was told that my dad had been killed in the war and my mother disappeared," Adriana said.

Two years later an estatic Adriana learned that her dad had survived after being shot seven times and that her mother had been found. After lots of complications, the family was reunited and able to escape to the United States as political refugees.

"We lost everything but each other," Adriana said with a cheerful smile. Although her parents work at entry-level jobs, Adriana said they aren't complaining. "We are happy to start a new life. We just want to live a normal life."

For her, a normal life is being able to attend college and pursue fashion design.

"Drawing brings me such joy. I'm really creative," Adriana said.

She's not only creative, but a brilliant student. As the top math student, Adriana was selected to represent her high school at a convention for high schools held at Millersville University. At Hempfield, Adriana is a member of the National Honor Society, math tutor, English tutor for foreign language students, a member of the table tennis club, and an art volunteer. She also is a translator for families from Bosnia who have settled in the county.

Another scholarship winner is Richard Bollinger of Lititz. Richard grew up on his parents' (Thomas and Barbara Bollinger) dairy farm. He plans to study animal science at Cornell University to pursue a career as a veterinarian or in agricultural law.

"Cornell offers a good agriculture program that allows you to mix and match majors," Richard said of his college choice.

At Ephrata High School, Richard is a member of the National Honor Society, former vice president and reporter of the FFA, a tutor for the Big Buddy program, and stage crew member for the school musical.

Richard was part of the Penn State Governor's School last summer, and remains active in a community service project in cleaning up stream banks with the Cheseapeake Bay Association.

Nicole Eisenhower raises pigs, goats, steers, and a horse on her parents' (Timothy and Roxanne Grube) farm in Elizabethtown. This experience has inspired her to pursue a career as a large animal science veterinarian. She plans to study animal science at Montana State University.

"It's a great agriculture college, a pretty campus, and a colder climate— I like cold weather—and it's in the West—I've always wanted to go west," Nicole said.

At Elizabethtown High School, Nicole was president of the FFA, a member of the livestock judging team, and a member of the National Honor Society.

Dwight Forry enjoys farming so much that he plans to return to the family farm after studying agriculture at Delaware Valley College.

With his parents Daniel and Dorothy Forry, he raises dairy replacement heifers and crop farms 200 acres on the home farm.

A student at Hempfield High School, Dwight said that he is one of only five students who live on a farm.

"Growing up on a farm gave me a much different perspective than my classmates. It helped me understand science and history because of my experience in working in the field," he said.

At Hempfield, Dwight is a member of the National Honor Society, Student Council, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, varsity wrestling, and varsity soccer.

Stephanie Herr was influenced to study animal bioscience at Penn State after attending the five-week Governor's School last summer at the university.

Since third grade, Stephanie has wanted to become a small animal veterinarian. Her choice of colleges was undecided until she attended the Governor's School and became acquainted with some of the professors.

At Solanco High School, Stephanie is active in cross country, track, FFA, National Honor Society, and secretary of Interact, a community service club.

She is vice president of her church youth group, a member of the choir, and softball team. Stephanie has also received a scholarship from the Soroptimist Club.

Eight recipients of the $1,400 scholarships awarded by the Farm and Home Foundation include, from left, Richard Bollinger, Nicole Eisenhower, Dwight Forry, Adriana Galijasevic, Stephanie Herr, Angela Pilara, Tara Sensenig, Kendra Weaver, and Dwight Forry.

Angela Pilara's great love for the outdoors combined with encouragement from her boss, owner of Wood's Edge Flora, Denver, has pointed her toward pursuing horticulture at Temple University.

Angela has worked part time at the greenhouse for four years through the school's cooperative program. Her employer paid for her to take horticulture classes at Longwood Gardens.

"Temple's Ambler Campus has a really good horticulture program," Angela said.

At Ephrata High School, Angela was an FFA member. Because she worked so diligently at the greenhouse during off-school hours, Angela hasn't had time to participate in after-school activities, but she is active in church activities. Angela, daughter of Mary Ann Pilara, Denver, also received scholarships from two garden clubs.

When Tara Sensenig was trying to decide what to study in college, her sister suggested she study dietetics because of her interest in eating healthful foods.

"When I was little, I ate really bad and was unhealthy," Tara said. After seeing some family members die of health problems, Tara started reading all she could about nutrition.

When she was 13, Tara changed her eating habits to cut out processed products with lots of preservatives and fillers in them.

"My body reacted quickly and I felt 10 times better," she said.

She is excited about studying clinical dietetics at the University of Pittsburgh. She said, "I love the school, the city, and everything about going there."

With a student body of 14,000, the transition from her small hometown of Reinholds sounds thrilling to Tara.

A student at Cocalico High School, Tara is the daughter of Christine Young. At Cocalico, Tara is yearbook editor, and a writer for the newspaper and literary club. She is also a member of the recycling club.

She hopes to combine her love of writing with nutrition and write food and fitness articles for magazines.

Tara describes herself as an enthusiastic participant in church activities. She recently received a scholarship from the Denver Women's Club.

Kendra Weaver is best known as both county and state poultry ambassador. She has also received press coverage about poultry research that she has done for the Science Fair and as an FFA project.

The daughter of Keith and JoAnne Weaver, Kendra helps with the the broiler and pig nursery on the family's Reinholds farm.

At Ephrata High School, Kendra has served as president, vice president, and student adviser of the FFA. She is vice president of the National Honor Society and yearbook editor.

At church, Kendra is vice president of the youth group, a member of the worship team, and a piano player.

Kendra has a strong interest in international agriculture. She plans to combine her love for both agriculture and missions by studying agri-education at Penn State and use her agriculture education to serve with a missionary focus in a poor country.

In addition to the scholarships, the board of the Farm and Home Foundation also recognized Chet Nein for his 18 years as building manager for the Farm and Home Center. Luke Brubaker, president of the board, presented Nein, who is retiring, with a check and plaque.

Chet Nein, left, accepts an award from Luke Brubaker, president of the Farm and Home Foundation, in appreciation of his 18 years as building manager.

Groups Call For Congressional Hearing On Livestock Markets

WASHINGTON, D. C. – National Farmers Union (NFU) has joined the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association in requesting that the Senate Agriculture Committee hold a hearing on livestock market opportunities for U.S. producers.

"Restoring profitability to agricultural markets is among NFU's top priorities and one way to achieve this is with fair and open markets," said NFU Vice President of Government Relations Tom Buis. "We are pleased to join other agriculture organizations in requesting a hearing on this important issue.

A letter sent recently to Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., stated: "Our members and organizations have concerns about recent low livestock prices and the impact that they are having in rural America...Boxed beef prices have declined below last year's levels and 1998 prices are sharply below 1997 prices for pork and poultry." The letter pointed to the fact that recent USDA advisory committees—the 1996 Advisory Committee on Agricultural Concentration and the 1997 National Commission on Small Farms—had reviewed concentration in agricultural markets and concluded that greater competition would be beneficial to producers and consumers alike.

NFU says the fact that three multinational firms control nearly 80 percent of all U.S. red meat processing on a nationwide basis leaves many producers only one or two markets to which they can sell their livestock. Despite the 25-30 percent drop in cattle prices over the past two and half years, consumer prices have not gone down. The Cattle Industry Improvement Act (S.16), a bill which addresses many of the problems facing livestock producers, was introduced in the U.S. senate by Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle last year. Similar legislation soon will be introduced in the U.S. House.

The three organizations requesting the congressional hearings asked that they address, but not be restricted to: Need for better pricing reporting, labeling of domestic and imported products, review of current concentration levels in the meat industry with a comparison to antitrust legal boundaries and relative to changes occurring in the banking and software industries, more timely export sales and shipping information, importance of expanding trade opportunities, impact of the Asian financial crisis on livestock prices, impact of competitive market forces, including changes in domestic and international competing meat industries, on meat and livestock prices, and responsiveness of meat industry to changing consumers trends and demographics.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

Many people are wondering what is going on in our country? Why are we headed for a one world economy, global government, industries becoming monopoly in their fields? Big farmers eating up the smaller ones.

It's because of low income for our raw materials, forcing many of us to go in debt to keep above water so to speak!

How come, when I was growing up in the fifties, I bought a new car $3,200, corn was $1.90 - $2.00 bushel. Today cars are 25,000 to $30,000 and corn is still $2.00 at harvest time.

What we need is a "balanced economy" on par with the rest of the economy! Please look at the internet for "NORM" (www.normeconomics.org). Then you will see what's happening!

Policies Clarify Producer Responsibilities

DES MOINES, Iowa – Pork producers involved in farm-to-farm sales of feeder pigs and seedstock who are not yet remitting checkoff funds are asked to begin checkoff remittance between now and July 1.

The National Pork Board has approved a temporary policy that forgives any past checkoff payments or late penalties on producers not yet remitting checkoff. The board believes producers involved in farm-to-farm sales may not have been aware of their checkoff obligations and this are not remitting checkoff.

Direct delivery of feeder pigs from one farm to another has increased in recent years. Direct delivery enables producers to purchase feeder pigs with a known health status and genetic quality. Today's definition of feeder pigs includes weaner pigs or segregated early weaned pits. In these producer-to-producer transactions, the seller has the responsibility for paying checkoff on the feeder pigs.

Buyers of feeder pigs should be certain the seller is taking the responsibility to remit the checkoff, otherwise there is a buyer responsibility to deduct it from the seller's payment and remit it to the Pork Board.

"The National Pork Board, a 15-member producer board, wanted to take a proactive approach to compliance with the checkoff regulations on farm-to-farm sales," said Board President Esther VerMeer of Leighton, Iowa.

"The temporary policy is a way to draw attention to the producer responsibility that we feel has been overlooked. All we want is for producers responsible for paying checkoff to begin remitting their funds. The checkoff system was intended to include all types of producers and the board is charged with fairly and equitably applying the checkoff system," said VerMeer.

The penalty for not remitting checkoff is $1,000 per infraction and a 1.5 percent per month late fee. "If a producer is found not remitting checkoff on farm-to-farm sales after July 1, the National Pork Board, under the Pork Act, has the authority to collect up to three years worth of unpaid checkoff and penalties," according to Mike Simpson, executive vice president of the National Pork Board. "If records exist and it can be proven, uncollected checkoff going as far back as the beginning of the legislative checkoff many also be collected."

The Pork Board has also approved a policy that clarifies the responsibility of checkoff remittance for pigs received from limited liability corporations, also known as Sub Chapter S corporations. No checkoff is due if a producer receives pigs in the same percent as his/her ownership in the corporation. For example, if a producer receives 20 percent of the feeder pig production from the limited liability corporation of which he owns 20 percent, no checkoff is required. However, if this producer receives more than 20 percent of the feeder pigs, a checkoff remittance is required on the difference of the percent he received and his 20 percent ownership share.

Checkoff is collected at the rate of $0.45 per $100 value from all market hogs, feeder pigs and breeding stock produced in the United States, as well as imported hogs and pork products.

If there are questions about the responsibilities of producers or a need for further instructions and forms used for remitting checkoff on farm-to-farm sales, contact the National Pork Board at (800) 456-7675. The e-mail address is <porkbd@nppc.org>.

Cargill Monsanto Announce Joint Venture

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn – Cargill and Monsanto announced that they have signed a letter of intent to form a worldwide joint venture to create and market new products enhanced through biotechnology for the grain processing and animal feed markets

The 50-50 joint venture would draw from Monsanto's capabilities in genomics biotechnology, and seeds and from Gargill's global agricultural input, processing, and marketing infrastructure to develop and market new products with traits aimed at improving the processing efficiencies and animal nutrition qualities of major crops.

The venture is the first to create a system that links biotechnology research and development from seed through processing to the customer.

"The resources and capabilities of both companies will be deployed to speed the research and launch of new products, and to do so in a way that will create the greatest value for farmers and ranchers, the grain processing industry and consumers around the world," said Ernest S. Micek, Cargill chairman and chief executor officer. "This will yield more and better options for feeding a growing world population is an efficient and environmentally friendly way."

Bowen To Head Penn State's Agricultural And Extension Education

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Blannie E. Bowen, C. Lee Rumberger and Family Chair of Agriculture, will head the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences effective July 1.

The Department of Agricultural and Extension Education conducts educational, research and cooperative extension programs in teacher and extension education in agricultural sciences, family and youth development, and related fields.

"We're very pleased that Dr. Bowen has agreed to accept this position," said Dr. Robert Steele, dean of the college. "He brings a host of excellent qualifications and experience with him and will provide first-rate leadership for the department's efforts."

Bowen also serves as associate dean for graduate programs and senior faculty mentor in the Center for Minority Graduate Opportunities and Faculty Development in Penn State's Graduate School. As associate dean, he works with issues affecting students' completion of their graduate programs, "from the time they are admitted until they walk across the stage," he said.

As senior faculty mentor, he develops programs for minority tenured and tenure-track faculty on subjects ranging from promotion and tenure, to securing external funds, to "how to say no to extra obligations that keep faculty from completing their responsibilities." He will step down from this position when he assumes duties as department head.

Bowen joned Penn State in 1988 as the C. Lee Rumberger and Family Professor of Agriculture, a professorship endowed to support the teaching, research and extension programs of an outstanding faculty member in the College of Agricultural Sciences. He served as interim head for the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education from 1990 to 1992. He also served as undergraduate programs coordinator in the department from 1992 to 1996.

Bowen is known for his work on the participation of African Americans in the agricultural sciences. He also works on research methods and communications and instructional technologies. His current research methods and communications and instructinal technologies. His current research focuses on factors related to African American enrollment in secondary agricultural science courses and how ethnic minority students develop their attitudes toward the agricultural and food sciences. He also teaches a graduate course on research methods.

Bowen also has a strong background in communications. From 1986 to 1988, he was editor of "the Agricultural Education Magazine," a professional journal for agricultural educators involved in secondary and higher education, andn wrote monthly editorials on contemporary issues facing agricultural education. He began his writing career in college as a reporter for college and daily newspapers. "Newspaper writing is one of the best skills I ever developed," he said. "It was wonderful training for a faculty member. Not only did I learn to work under pressure, I learned to produce under deadlines."

Before joining Penn State, Bowen held a joint appointment at the Ohio State University in the Department of Agricultural Education and the School of Natural Resources. He began his academic career in 1980 at Mississippi State University, where he taught in the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education and was an extension training officer for the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Bowen received a doctorate in agricultural education from Ohio State in 1980 and a master's and bachelor's from North Carolina A&T State University, also in agricultural education.

He is active in many professional organizations, including Agricultural Communicators in Education; the American Association for Agricultural Education; Minorities in Agriculture, Natural Resources, and Related Sciences; the American Vocational Association; National Association of Colleges and Teachers of Agriculture; and the National FFA Organization. Bowen also is a member of Gamma Sigma Delta, Alpha Tau Alpha, Phi Delta Kappa and Omicron Tau Theta.

Chester Conservation District Celebrates 50th

Conservation Farmer Of Year Understands Season's Challenges

cipation and planning, and fits well into best management practices on conserved land.

For his efforts, Beam was honored Thursday evening with the Conservation Farmer of the Year Award at a special celebration honoring those who have served the district in this, the district's 50th anniversary. The celebration took place at the Brandywine Valley Association in West Chester.

According to Dan Grieg of the district, the Beam Farm includes approximately 1,754 acres of cropland in Elverson. The Beam Farm has been a cooperator with the district since 1983.

Since that time, the Beams have adopted many conservation practices in the plan, including conservation tillage, contour strips, residue management, contour or cross slope farming, cover crops, and nutrient management.

"William Beam has also carried on the conservation legacy on home and rented lands by constructing, rebuilding, or maintaining the following practices on his home and rented lands," noted the district.

Those practices include 14,965 feet of gradient terraces, 2,138 feet of grassed waterways, 820 feet of storage terrace, 615 feet of underground outlet, 1,551 feet of subsurface drainage, and 1,800 feet of diversions.

Beam noted that on his farms, 1,000 acres are in corn, 500 acres in beans (including double-crop soybeans), 225 acres are in small grains (barley and wheat), and he manages 100 acres of hay.

Beam was in the fields late last week, spraying herbicide and anticipating a year in which rotation is necessary to deal with weeds and disease and eventually be rotated back to corn, to improve yields.

Putting in beans will "help weed control and control disease in the corn. It's also good for the soil," Beam said.

Beam noted that, whenever he purchases new land or even leases new land in his farm program, he contacts the NRCS and they put a conservation program together. "All farms are under a conservation program," he said. That includes land he rents from "roughly, 30 landlords," said Beam.

He tries to work each parcel of land one at a time, a day at a time, within a certain area. "I don't run from one to another every other day," he said.

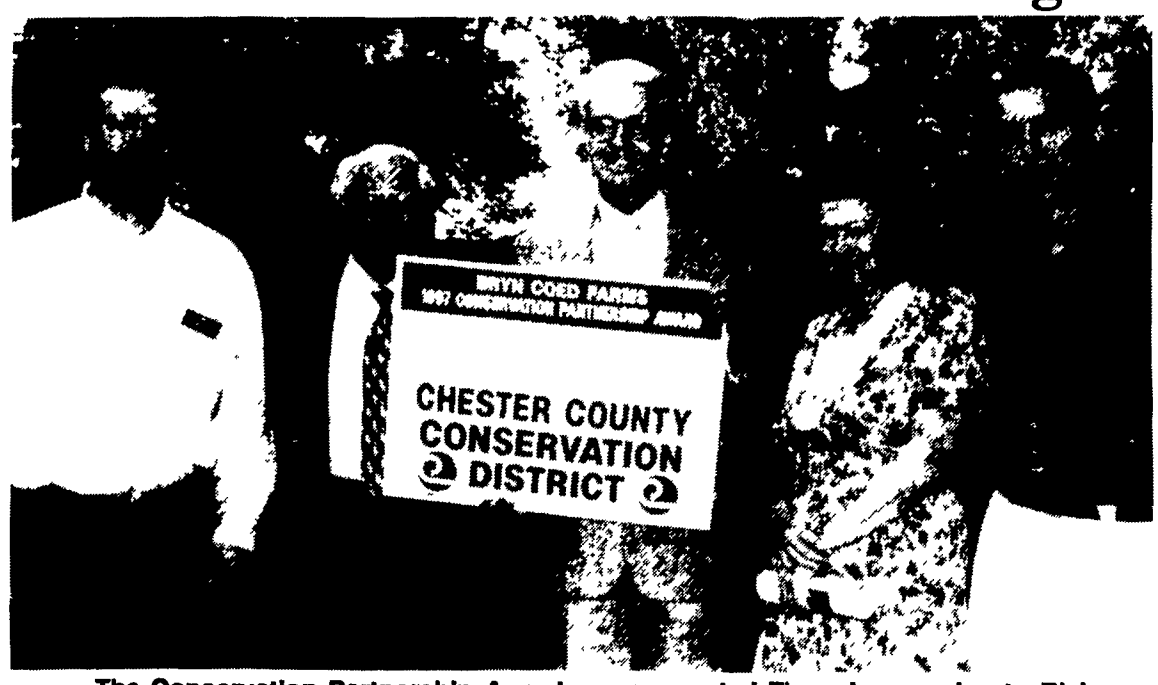
A big challenge has been exceedingly wet soil from the recent 13-day long stretch of rain — the longest in many counties in the southeast Pennsylvania region — which "can be a problem with no-till," he said. Beam noted that five inches of rain fell in a two-week time period. In some cases, he may have to chisel plow to warm up the soil and dry it out.

Beam uses a moldboard plow onto to maintain terraces.

In addition to cropland, Beam finishes about 40 head of beef per year, in addition to fair and Farm Show hogs.

He supplies sawdust bedding to various customers.

Also at the anniversary celebration, several others were honored by the district. They include:



The Conservation Partnership Award was presented Thursday evening to Rick Schlosberg and the Bryn Coed Farms, Chester Springs. Bryn Coed Farms and Schlosberg have maintained a partnership as landowner and tenant farmer for several years. Dan Grieg presents the award to Richard Dietrich, Bryn Coed Farms, center. From left, Grieg; Silvio Schiaroli, consultant for the farms; Dietrich; Donna Himmel; and Schlosberg.

• The Conservation Partnership Award. This was presented Thursday evening to Rich Schlosberg and the Bryn Coed Farms, Chester Springs. Bryn Coed Farms and Schlosberg have maintained a partnership as landowner and tenant farmer for several years. Bryn Coed Farms, primarily cash crops, has been a cooperator since 1975. Schlosberg became a cooperator in 1988. Bryn Coed entered a long-term agreement with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in 1992 and recently signed a contract in the Environmental Quality Incentive Program. The farms make use of conservation tillage, residue management, contour farming, nutrient management, cover crops, and pest management practices. They have constructed the following best management practices according to its conservation plan: 3,000 feet of subsurface drainage, 12,375 feet of grassed waterways, 13,375 feet of diversions, and three stone structures.

The Excellence in Conservation Award was presented to Heritage at Parke Farm Development in East Bradford Township. This award is given in recognition of a development, construction activity, or design in which exceptional best management practices are incorporated, implemented, and maintained. From left, Chip Vaughan and Ted Moser receive the honor from Dan Grieg.

• The 1997 Stewardship Award. This award was presented to Ben Beiler and Tim Barlow. Beiler and Barlow became cooperators in 1972 and implemented their first conservation plan in 1980. They also signed a long-term agreement with the NRCS in 1981 and again in 1994. Beiler and Barlow have taken great measures to ensure their farm in Russellville remains protected and in agriculture. This stewardship paired a young farmer with a well-established farmer to create a successful agricultural enterprise, according to the district. The farm uses conservation tillage, contour strips, cover crops, residue management, crop management, grasses and legumes in rotation, agronomic consultant, nutrient management, and pest management practices. The farm also uses 5,926 feet of grass waterways, 4,683 feet of gradient terrace, 1,735 feet of diversions, in addition to manure storage and barnyard runoff control methods.

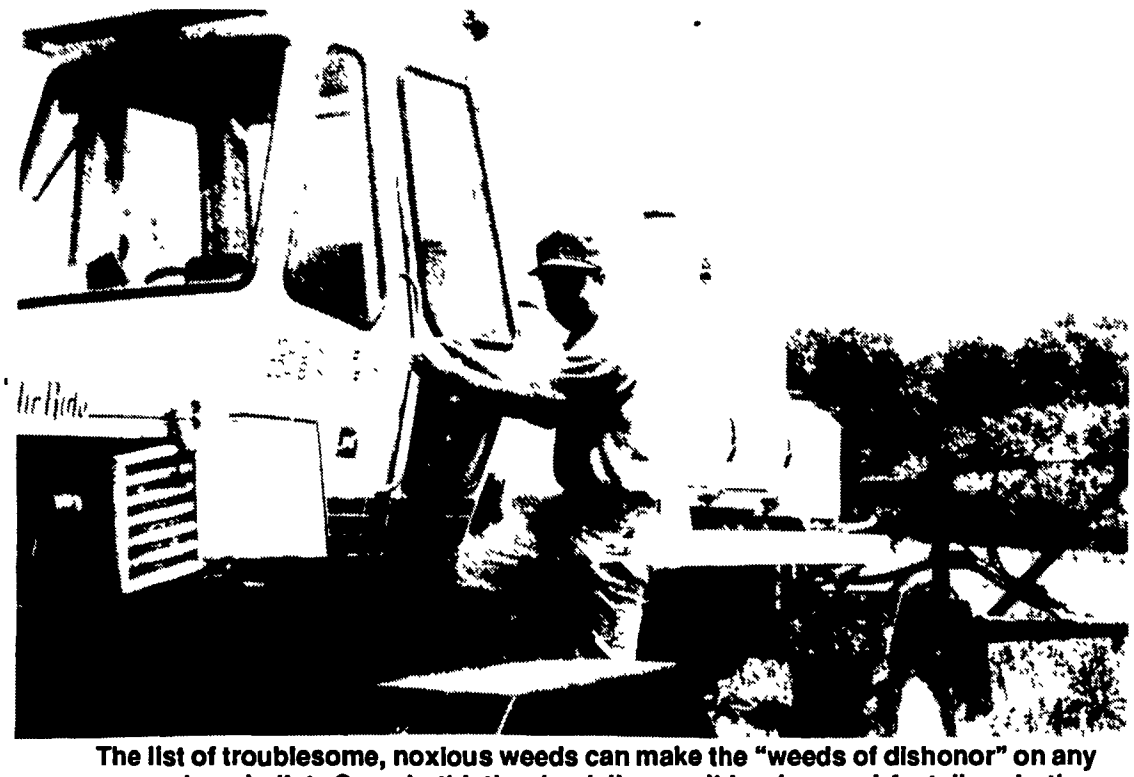
• Excellence In Conservation Award. This award was presented to Heritage at Parke Farm Development in East Bradford Township. This award is given in recognition of a development, construction activity, or design in which exceptional best management practices are incorporated, implemented, and maintained. The development, overlooking the east branch of the Brandywine River, demonstrates and showcases preservation of open spaces and viewsheds, protection of sensitive environmental features, alternative storm water management designs, and other erosion and sediment controls such as sediment traps, stabilized swales, silt fence and rock construction entrances, mulch for interim stabilization, minimal disturbance, and timely permanent stabilization.

Dan Grieg noted that the district was formed in July 1947 to provide technical assistance to farmers in developing a complete conservation program. In the first year of operations, 1948, 219 applications for assistance from landowners were received, 55 conservation plans were written, 110 soil surveys were completed, and 210 farmers were contacted.

In 1997, the district's budget was more than $300,000 with 12 full-time and part-time staff. Under the Chesapeake Bay Program, four new bay contracts were completed, best management practices worth more than $175,000 were installed, and under the erosion and sediment control program, in 1997 the district staff received approximately 722 plans, reviewed 674 plans, inspected 780 sites, and responded to 69 formal complaints.

Under the Red/White/Christina Program, the Red White Clay Creeks Land Treatment Program was funded by NRCS after a 10-year planning and marketing effort by the district and the local field office. NRCS and district partners signed up 40 landowners for the program. NRCS development conservation plans and wrote contracts to implement best management plans for 10 landowners, committing $549,721 in federal funds.

Under the nutrient management program, the staff developed nutrient management plans for 15 farmers.



The list of troublesome, noxious weeds can make the "weeds of dishonor" on any crop producer's list: Canada thistle, dandelions, wild onion, and foxtail and other grasses. Beam decided to bring out the spray boom and take care of the problem first — all the while hoping it would stay dry long enough to finish corn and soybean planting.

Dairy Farmers Can Get More For Milk

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — The debate raging in this region and in neighboring states about the so-called Dairy Compact brings home the realization that dairy farmers really have only two ways to improve the income from their milk production.

One way is political and dependent on another organization or agency to set the price you will get for your milk.

They base their calculation on prevailing market forces, including lobbying, export, health regulations, labor rules and keeping certain factories steaming at full capacity regardless of the low price to the farmer. And whether you like it or not, this price is what you will receive.

The other way is "going your own way."

It used to be this was a risky course. In fact, that is why, at the turn of this century, the formation of producer and marketing cooperatives was viewed as a safer route for the future of family farms.

This plan worked well here and in other countries. But times move on, conditions change. Even farmer cooperatives now find themselves dwarfed by powerful industry conglomerates.

Can individual dairiy farmers still go their own way? Is this how the family farm survives?

Entrepreneurs will make it and do well, but the less aggressive dairy farmers will do better under the umbrella of an organization, conformiong to the incentives that should make them the most milk money.

Does this mean that a Dairy Compact is comparable to efforts of unionization and demanding minimum prices for milk?

Maybe.

Perhaps that is why food store chains are lobbying so strongly against it.

Is this a wake-up call to farmers?

Maybe now they will see who their enemies are — the people preventing them from making a decent milk income.

Who wins?

The squeaky wheel, of course. But are dairy farmers squeaking loudly enough?

If you opt for the umbrella-group approach, find out what their incentives are for buying your milk, assuming that an incentive encourages you to do something favorable for the organization and for you, too, in the long run.

Milk buying organizations use, among others, two incentives in calculating the price they will pay you for your milk — butterfat price per pound, and nonfat milk solids price per pound.

Some dairy farmers are taking these incentives under consideration and others aren't. What's the difference to your pocketbook?

Last month, the University of Delaware herd tested 3.78 percent butterfat (F) and 8.79 percent nonfat milk solids (NFMS).

Another herd (let's call it B), with the same number of 150 cows and same milk yield, tested 4.1 percent F and 8.9 percent NFMS. At current prices of $1.2332/pound F and $1.02/pound NFMS, herd B had an income advantage of $1,497 per month.

Not far from here, another herd (C), with the same number of cows and same milk yield, tested 3.3 percent F and 8.5 percent NFMS. At current prices, that herd made $2,644 less than the University's herd per month, and $4,142 less than herd B.

This kind of income difference for your milk is not magic.

Herd B's genetic selection for higher butterfat contents in the milk and higher nonfat milk solids is working to the farmer's financial advantage.

The progress by genetic selection for milk contents can be achieved even easier than for milk yield, because heritability of milk contents is double that of milk yield.

Progress for more milk yield has, for the most part, been well managed in recent years.

Progress for milk contents should be equally well managed, even while recognizing that milk yield tends to drop if you are not selecting for both.

In addition to genetic selection, you can influence (mostly in a negative way) fat and nonfat milk solids contents through variations in management of feeding, room temperature, labor's milking management, and subclinical mastitis.

There have been many studies on how to improve nonfat milk solids contents, because it is of economic importance to cheese-making and to the taste of skim milk.

The consensus is that milk contents are more easily decreased than increased by most efforts other than genetics.

The best advice is to increase the energy content of the dairy feed ration, especially the concentrate, without changing its fat content.

Often, this will increase the milk protein and, thereby, the nonfat milk solids contents.

In addition, the feed supply of two often-limiting amino acids — lysine and methionine — also must be optimal.

How do you do this? It takes a computer program and a nutrition consultant to calculate this, while genetic selection is as easy as reading the bull proof charts.

However, what can you do when your genetics, feeding, environmental temperatures and subclinical mastitis are under good control?

Use your monthly fat tests on each cow, when you participate in a DHIA program, so you can select which cow to keep.

But you do not have monthly nonfat milk solids tests on each of your cows in this region; this figure is only on your milk tank when you sell your milk, which is a real handicap because you do not know which cow to keep for NFMS and which one to cull because of low tests!

For the last three to five years in this region, dairy farmers have been paid a NFMS incentive, yet these same farmers are not provided a program by which they can select for beteter cow NFMS genetics to improve their milk and milk income.

These farmers are handicapped by uncertainty about their cows' NFMS and the information they need, to achieve better milk income.

Of course, none of this interferes with the policies or philosophies of the food store chains.

Whether you decide to join a Dairy Compact or not and without affecting store milk prices, your farm already can make $4,142 more than another farm with the same number of cows and pounds of milk per month.

Just pay attention to the incentives paid for milk contents listed on your monthly milk check.

National Dairy Shrine Preserves History

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Any industry as dynamic as dairying in the United States needs its history recorded and its future celebrated.

The National Dairy Shrine, an organization made up of producers, business people, retirees and students, has been committed to that end for almost 50 years.

The National Dairy Shrine annually gives more than $20,000 in scholarships to students in dairy-related fields. it also recognizes the lifelong achievements of industry leaders, educators, breeders and show people.

For a hands-on historical perspective on dairying in the United States, the National Dairy Shrine maintains its popular Visitors' Center next to the Hoard's Museum in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.

Along with support of these causes, members enjoy receptions at dairy events across the country, a national newsletter and an internship directory for post-secondary students.

For more information on joining the National Dairy Shrine at a one-time fee of $50, please write Maurice Core at National Dairy Shrine, 1224 Alton-Darby Creek Road, Columbus, OH 43228-9792 or call (614) 878-5333.

Penn State Uses Cloning Technology To Improve Cocoa Plants

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Scientists in a Penn State research program have developed a process to clone genetically identical cocoa trees from cocoa flowers, which could enhance cocoa plant quality on a large scale. And that, in turn, could increase cocoa farming profitably and stabilize the supply of cocoa beans on the global market.

"Right now, cocoa plants are grown from seed, and these plants vary greatly in their yield and disease resistance," said Mark Guiltinan, associate professor of plant molecular biology in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "In some cases, up to 50 percent of the trees can be substandard. By selecting the best trees and producing identical clones, we potentially can increase plant productivity on farms."

Guiltinan and a team of scientists soon will begin a long-term field test of cloned cocoa plants at the Union Vale Estate on Saint Lucia Island in the West Indies (located off the northern coast of South America). The estate is owned by Edmund Opler, chief executive officer of World's Finest Chocolate Inc.

The Penn State team, funded by the American Cocoa Research Institute, collected flowers from 14 of the most productive cocoa trees on the estate. As a control, they also collected flowers from several of the worst trees. The flowers were flown back to Penn State University Park campus, where individual cells from the buds were grown into full-sized plants. Guiltinan says the process, called "somatic embryogenesis," replicates a more complete plant than those derived from grafting.

"Plants produced from grafts do not develop a tap root that can sustain the plant in adverse conditions," Guiltinan explained. "Grafted plants also grow in the shape of a bush and have to be pruned during growth to resemble a natural cocoa tree. In Brazil alone, there are 660 million cocoa plants, which means a lot of pruning."

The plants produced from the flower cells have been grown in Penn State greenhouses for the past year. By June, the cloned cocoa plants will be planted in a Union Vale Estate field together with plants grown from grafts and from seed. Over the next three to five years, researchers will measure growth rates, pod production and chocolate-making quality.

"When plant breeders find a superior plant, the idea is to make more of them," Guiltinan said. "A tree grown from a single cell is genetically identical to the parent tree from which the flower was isolated. This means plant breeders can choose plants that are best adapted to a particular geographic area or are resistant to certain diseases."

Guiltinan said the cocoa tree cloning project on Saint Lucia will take years to implement on a large scale because the plants take four to five years to mature enough for scientists to gauge yield, production and disease resistance. "Corn breeders can produce three generations of plants in one year," Guiltinan said. "Cocoa will take 15 years to reach the same stage of development."

If tests prove positive, then cocoa-producing nations can increase production of promising lines of cocoa plants. "Brazil currently has 600 million plants susceptible to disease, and breeders there have only a few hundred plants from which to start a breeding program," Guiltinan explained.

Guiltinan said the economic implications of Penn State's research are significant. Most cocoa is grown on small farms in five countries: Brazil, Ghana, Indonesia, the Ivory Coast and Malaysia. If breeding programs can produce plants particularly well-suited for different growing areas, farmers' incomes will increase. In addition, the elimination of boom-or bust crop cycles will help stabilize world cocoa production, which would benefit Pennsylvania's $4 billion chocolate industry. Pennsylvania is the country's top chocolate-producing state.

Increased cocoa production also may have an ecological benefit, Guiltinan says. The cocoa plants are a sustainable crop for tropical ecosystems because they are grown for long periods of time. The plants also require a large canopy of shade trees for growth, which offers superior habitat for migratory birds and other wildlife. In addition, cocoa farms could act as connective greenways between islands of rainforest habitat.

In addition to the Penn State cloning process, which has a provisional patent, Guiltinan's team also is starting a genetic engineering research program to breed plants resistant to disease and pests.

By injecting a plant with the DNA of a natural pesticide, horticulturists can breed plants resistant to such pests as the cocoa pod borer, which is the major pest in Malaysia, or the myriad, an insect that infests cocoa crops in the Ivory Coast. Similar treatments for such plant diseases as witch's broom, pod rot and cocoa swollen shoot virus could be engineered into the genetic blueprint for cocoa plants, Guiltinan said.

"Forty percent of the cocoa crop is lost to disease and pests every year," Guiltinan said. "That's billions of dollars lost to the economies of cocoa-producing countries."

Waterloo Club Highlights Restoration

KINZERS (Lancaster Co.) — The Waterloo Boys of Southeast Pennsylvania is an all two-cylinder John Deere Club whose goal is the promotion and restoration of old two-cylinder John Deere tractors and equipment.

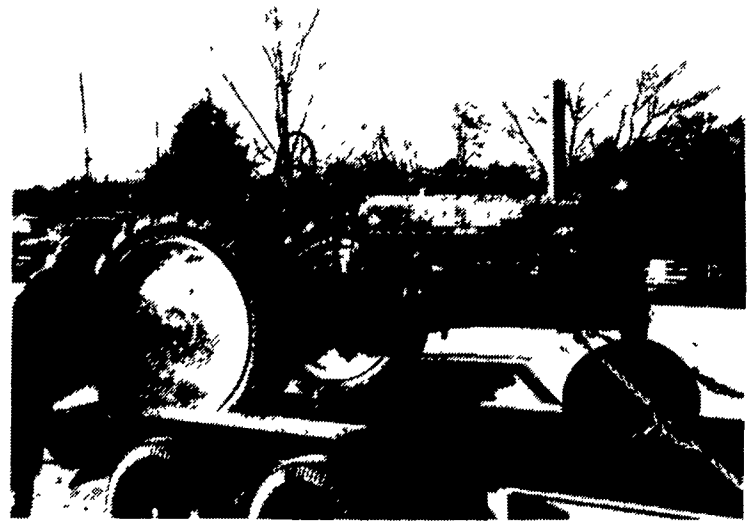
Though Deere and Company had its engineers working at tractor development in the early 1900s, it wasn't until 1918 when they purchased the Waterloo Tractor Company and became a major participant in the tractor sales arena.

The Waterloo Boy tractor was considered to be one of the best built tractors, if not the best built one of the 1900s. Thus, when several men started our two-cylinder club, they chose the name The Waterloo Boys of Southeast Pennsylvania.

Approximately four years ago, the club decided to raise money. Ever since 1993, the club has been restoring one two-cylinder John Deere per year and selling raffle tickets on them, which has turned out to be the club's biggest source of income to date.

Last year, the club repaired a model 40 tricycle, started selling tickets in the spring and continued selling at various shows throughout the summer, until the fall Harvest Show at Rough and Tumble. At the contest, the winner was Ben Haines of Rising Sun, Md.

Proceeds from those first five tractors played a major role in the club's ability to purchase the dream tractor, a Waterloo Boy. Eventually the Waterloo Boys will restore the tractor. This year's raffle tractor is a beautiful 1938 Unstyled John Deere B. If anyone is interested in learning more about the Waterloo Boys Club, or would lilke to join, contact the club at Waterloo Boys, Box 9, Kinzers, PA 17535.



This 1938 Unstyled John Deere Model B is the 1998 raffle tractor. The winning ticket will be drawn Oct. 10 at Rough and Tumble.

Cargill Monsanto Announce Joint Venture

"The Cargill and Monsanto relationship marks the expansion of how our customers gain new value from the benefits of crops enhanced through biotechnology," said Monsanto Chairman and CEO Robert Shapiro. "Together we'll deliver new solutions based on the rapid development of the next generation of plant traits—those that enhance the quality and economics of feed and processed grains—to markets around the world."

The joint venture will focus on applying biotechnology to improve feed products for animals raised for human consumption, such as pork, beef, poultry and fish It also will develop and market feed additives grown in crops using biotechnology

The venture also will create and market crops with traits designed to reduce costs and improve yields for the wet and dry milling, oilseed crushing and refining, feed compounding, and other processing industries.

Other details about the joint venture have not been finalized. While the initial agreement involves animal feed and grain processing, Monsanto and Cargill will explore future opportunities to expand the partnership into agriculture and food.

FSA Farm Loans For Socially Disadvantaged Persons

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Farm Service Agency (FSA) can make and guarantee loans to socially disadvantaged applicants to buy and operate family-size farms and ranches. Funds specifically for these loans are reserved each year.

A socially disadvantaged farmer is one of a group whose members have been subject to racial, ethnic, or gender prejudice because of their identity as members of the group without regard to their individual qualities. For purpose of this program, socially disadvantaged groups are women, African Americans, American Indians and Alaskan Natives, Hispanics, and Asians and Pacific Islanders.

Direct loans are made to applicants by FSA and include both farm operating and farm ownership loans.

Guaranteed loans also may be made for ownership or operating purposes, and may be made by any lending institution subject to federal or state supervision (banks, savings and loans, insurance companies, and units of the Farm Credit system.) Typically, FSA guarantees 90 or 95 percent of a loan against any loss that might be incurred if the loan fails.

Farm ownership loan funds may be used to purchase or enlarge a farm, purchase easements or rights of way needed in the farm's operation, erect or improve buildings such as a dwelling or barn, promote soil and water conservation and development, and pay closing costs.

Farm operating loan funds may be used to purchase livestock, poultry, farm and home equipment, feed, seed, fuel, fertilizer, chemicals, hail and other crop insurance, food, clothing, medical care and hired labor. Funds also may be used to install or improve water systems for home use, livestock or irrigation, and other improvements.

Individuals, partnerships, joint operations, corporations, and cooperatives primarily and directly engaged in farming and ranching on family-size operations may apply. A family-size farm is considered to be one that a family can operate and manage itself.

In addition to being members of a socially disadvantaged group, individual applicants under this program must meet all requirements for FSA's regular farm loan program assistance. To be eligible, an applicant must, among other requirements:

- Have a satisfactory history of meeting credit obligations.
- Have sufficient education, training, or at least 1 year's experience in managing or operating a farm or ranch within the last 5 years for an operating loan, or, for an ownership loan, have 3 years experience in operating a farm or ranch.
- Be a citizen of the United States (or a legal resident alien).
- Be unable to obtain credit elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms to meet actual needs.
- Possess the legal capacity to incur the obligations of the loan.

In the case of corporations, cooperatives, joint operations, or partnerships, the stockholders, members, or partners holding a majority interest must meet these same eligibility requirements. The borrowing entity must be authorized to operate a farm or ranch in the state where the actually operation is located. In addition, the entity must be owned by U.S. citizens or legal resident aliens, and socially disadvantaged members must hold a majority interest in the entity.

If the individuals holding a majority interest in the entity are related by blood or marriage, at least one stockholder, member, or partner must operate the family farm or ranch. If they are not related by blood or marriage, those holding a majority interest must operate the family farm or ranch.

Repayment terms for direct operating loans depend on the collateral securing the loan and usually run from 1 to 7 years. Repayment terms for direct ownership loans can be as long as 40 years. Guaranteed loan terms are set by the lender.

Interest rates for direct loans are set periodically according to the Government's cost of borrowing.

Interest rates for guaranteed loans are established by the lender.

Guaranteed loan applications are made with the lender. In cases where a lender is not known to an applicant, personnel at the county offices will help find one and will help with the application, either for a direct loan or a guaranteed loan.

Persons who think they might be eligible are urged to contact the Farm Agency County Office located at 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601-3149.

NASDA Supports Plant Protection

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA), in a news release this week expressed its strong support for proposed legislation in the U.S. House of Representatives, "the Plant Protection Act."

Although the news release didn't detail the goals of the legislation, nor any specific mechanisms for achieving those goals, it is assumed that the legislation was proposed as an alternative to recent efforts by the current administration of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to implement the Food Protection Act.

The Food Protection Act was passed to repeal the old Delaney Clause which had a zero tolerance standard for pesticide residues in food.

The zero tolerance standard was adopted when residue detection technology was such that it could not detect extremely small amounts of residue.

After many years of improvements in testing technology, science is now capable of detecting residues or possible pesticide residues (residues are the chemical remains after the main chemical breaks down) that were there all along.

It has been suggested that during the heyday of the Delaney Clause's zero tolerance application, there could have been much higher amounts of pesticide residues in food.

In the meantime, the agriculture industry began cutting back on its use of chemical pesticides, in response to higher chemical costs, increased competition and decreased profit margins, and for some environmental concern.

According to several sources, the EPA is now attempting to eliminate several lines of agricultural pesticides through an interpretation of the new law that effectively retains the "zero tolerance" standard.

In the NASDA news release, it states, "American agriculture is the safest and most productive in the world and (this) legislation helps to ensure that it stays that way," said Gus Douglass, chairman of NASDA's Animal and Plant Industries Committee, as well as commissioner of the West Virginia Department of Agriculture.

The legislation being supported is HR 3766.

"The commissioners, secretaries and directors of the state departments of agriculture applaud Rep. Canady for introducing this important legislation and the committee for holding (a public hearing)."

According to the newsletter, in a letter to the House Agriculture Committee, NASDA urged "the committee and the Congress to act quickly to approve this important and long overdue legislation."

According to NASDA President D. Leslie Tindal, "Every day the state departments of agriculture are faced with plant pest and disease concerns that have the potential to threaten the vitality of the agricultural industry.

"This legislation is needed so that the agriculture community can better respond to emergency situations and to provide the appropriate authority to the USDA in the detection, control, eradication, suppression and/or prevention of the spread of plant pests and disease," Tindal said.

NASDA is a nonfprofit association of public officials representing the commissioners, secretaries and directors of agriculture in the 50 states and four territories.

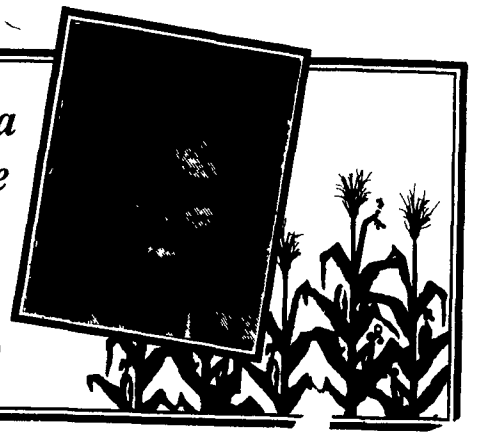
On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp



The phrase sounded a bit odd.

"It's too green," The Farmer had just said.

Too green? After the latest monsoon week in which more that five inches of rain—nearly an inch a day—had fallen?

Too green? Imagine.

That observation momentarily sounded hilarious, especially hard on the heels of last year's drought when we prayed almost non-stop for green, green green.

But, in this case, the "too green" description was assessed over a couple of would-be soybean fields, located on north-sloped ground and blanketed end-to-end with the thickest, lushest growth of chickweed one could ever want to find. Drive across a field thick with such chickweed and it turns into Mother Nature's instant version of an oil-slick. The virtually unpenetrable layer of thick, gooey, vegetative material is also well– nigh– impossible to run planting equipment through with any hope of seeding success.

If the beans were ever to be tucked into the waiting soil in a proper manner to take root and grow, the chickweed growth had go. So, in this case, those fields surely were "too green." The Farmer merely plotted the field strategy flexibility, which crop producers have had to exercise in this thus-far soggy, swampy spring.

Just minutes before, I'd squished through the asparagus bed, snapping off the latest growth of fat, thick, tasty spears we've been enjoying for the past several weeks. The asparagus patch has thrived in the moisture, but in retrospect, promises to be a candidate for the "too green" category.

Because, poking up all around the asparagus growth were vibrant, healthy clumps of "too green" weed cover. A lush growth of unwanteds, waving their still-small, lush leaves in the light evening breeze, mocking me to come an get 'em. Between digging up and moving red raspberry roots which had also laid claim over into the neighboring asparagus patch, I did yank at some of the clumps of "too green."

And everytime I pulled one handful of the fledgling greenery, two more popped up to in its place.

Or at least it looked that way in the next morning's bright sunshine.

With the abundance of wonderful moisture, nudged by balmy temperatures and strengthening sunshine, even grass pulled up and left lay in piles two weeks ago have undergone resurrection and are attempting to shoot fat, white roots back into the ground. Every nook and cranny, every crack between sidewalk or patio blocks, every corner where soil meets pavement, wall or building block is sprouting clumps of greenery.

In fact, the tufts of grass poking out and around the walks around the house have proven handy for another lawn problem, not of "too green," but of "no green." Spot excavations for a water line replacement resulted in several bare sections of grass in the yard. So the volunteer turf growing in all sorts of unwanted places is being yanked up and plugged into a patchwork effect in those bare patches, to hopefully grow together and fill in the blanks.

Our own little, self-contained, mini-turf farm for growing lawn sod. Sort of.

Now, if we could generate some demand for chickweed, we could do the same thing on a larger (more profitable?) scale, with the "too green" growth that needs to be eliminated ahead of the soybeans.

Anyone out there interested in planting a chickweed lawn? It would grow lush and thick in the spring, then dry up and not need to be mowed, trimmed, aerated, thatched or fed over the summer when folks would rather do beach, vacation and picnic-like stuff. In fact, we'll sell the chickweed sod very reasonably. And even label it authentically "organic."

Now there's a niche market possibility.

NEWARK, Del. – Which elementary schools have butterfly gardens? Who has tried making bird nest boxes with second-graders? Anybody have tips on starting a school wildflower meadow?

Educators interested in learning more about school-based garden sites have a new, Web-based resource to turn to: the Delaware Cooperative Extension School Wildlife Habitat Directory.

"We are striving to be a central information point for educators," says Jo Mercer, New Castle County Extension educator for ornamental horticulture "This is a place where teachers can discover others involved in gardening projects, make contact with them and learn from their experiences."

The Web Site contains detailed information about gardens at approximately 50 New Castle County schools. Sites include public, private, and parochial elementary, middle and high schools, as well as preschool gardens.

May Is Osteoporosis Prevention Month

Bone Research Helps Fight Silent Disease

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — "Osteoporosis is a silent disease."

That's the message that Dr. Ronald Emkey, director of Bone Research Center, reiterates in his many talks during the month of May, designated as Osteoporosis Prevention Month.

Osteoporosis is thinning of the bones that results in fractures, pain, and crippling posture caused by low bone mass and deterioration of bone tissue. About 25 million Americans have osteoporosis. Four out of five are women. Women are often unaware they have osteoporosis until damage is done.

Despite recent advances in the treatment and prevention of osteoporosis, research shows that 77 percent of osteoporosis goes undiagnosed and only nine percent that is diagnosed is being treated.

"This is abominable," Emkey said.

Because osteoporosis is undiagnosed and untreated in the majority of cases, every other woman 50 years and older will have a osteoporosis-related bone fracture, according to Emkey.

"More women die from complications from osteoporosis than from uterine or breast cancer. For every 100 women who have a hip fracture, 20 will die. Fifty percent of those who have a hip fracture will never fully recover," Emkey said.

It's even possible for women to have fractured vertebrae and not even be aware of it. Emkey showed slides of actual vertebrae of osteoporosis patients in which the vertebrae appeared to be only half the size of that of a healthy adult.

According to Emkey, one of the first signs of osteoporosis is an ache between the shoulder blades. Osteoporosis progressively and irreversibly weakens the bones to the point that any movement can cause a painful fracture of the hip, spine or other bones.

"The bone becomes so thin that they may break from sneezing and coughing," he said.

As far as hip fractures, the bone become so brittle that it can break by just walking.

"More women die from complications from osteoporosis than from uterine or breast cancer," said Dr. Ronald Emkey, director of Bone Research Center. Emkey finds it deplorable that despite recent advances in prevention and treatment of osteoporosis, 77 percent of osteoporosis goes undiagnosed and only nine percent that is diagnosed is treated.

In addition to fractures, osteoporosis sufferers can experience a loss of height, severe back pain, or spinal deformities, such as stooped posture or a humped back.

Some women are more likely to develop osteoporosis than others. The highest risk group is female, slight or slender built, fair skinned, a family history of osteoporosis, low muscle mass, low bone mass at age 35, and early menopause. A hysterectomy puts women at even great risk.

"The thinner you are, the greater your risk. But I've seen 300-pound women who also have osteoporosis," Emkey said.

Risk is even greater for women with a sedentary lifestyle, low calcium intake, cigarette smoking, and increased intakes of protein, alcohol, fiber, and caffeine.

"For every drag of a cigarette, you lose a little calcium. Second hand smoke also depletes calcium supply," Emkey said.

Fiber, while touted to prevent colon cancer, binds calcium, and causes calcium intake to move out of the body before being absorbed.

Emkey is concerned that many young girls are not eating enough calcium-rich foods. "We are seeing girls in their 20s with osteoporosis," he said of the dangers of a low-calcium diet during "peak bone mass" years. Studies predict that the incident of fractures from osteoporosis will double the the year 2050 because of so many young girls not consuming enough calcium.

"You can't take too much calcium. The recommended amount of calcium is 1,500 mg daily for post-menopausal women. After the age of 50, people should take calcium with Vitamin D because the body does not absorb it well if Vitamin D is not taken.

"Osteoporosis can be prevented," Emkey said. He stresses that every woman above 50 years of age should have a bone density test.

Unfortunately many doctors do not authorize the test and many health plans do not cover it.

If you are diagnosed with osteoporosis, it can be treated to prevent additional bone loss. Your doctor can prescribe a diet and exercise program tailored to your needs. Several medications such as estrogen, alendronate, and calcitonin can prevent further bone loss. Additional therapies are also being researched.

Emkey founded the Bone Research Center located at the The Reading Hospital and Medical Center in 1990. The center is a national leader in researching the prevention and treatment of osteoporosis.

The privately-funded center uses volunteers to participate in clinical studies of new drugs that stop the devastating effects of osteoporosis.

Bone density tests are available free to women who participate in a clincal research study conducted by Emkey.

The study compares the effects of several different types of estrogens in preventing bone loss compared with a control group taking a placebo.

Participants must be post-menopausal and in relatively good health. Age is not a deterrent. Emkey said participants range from 35 to 90 years of age.

The screening process includes a thorough physical examination, free of charge. The exam includes an electrocardiogram, mammogram, blood and urine specimens, back and bone density (DXA) X-ray scans of the lower spine, hip and whole body. In addition a gynecologist will give a breast examination, pelvic examination, a Pap smear test, and a transvaginal ultrasound.

Participants are needed for ongoing research. Participants are reimbursed for travel expenses to the center. In addition, they receive free medication and calcium supplements.

Emkey is especially interested in comparing the bones of women from a dairy background, who have probably consumed calcium-rich dairy products for years compared to women from nonfarm backgrounds. People who are predisposed to getting osteoporosis or those who already have osteoporosis are also needed for the study.

The center is also studying estrogen preparations and drugs that prevent and treat breast cancer.

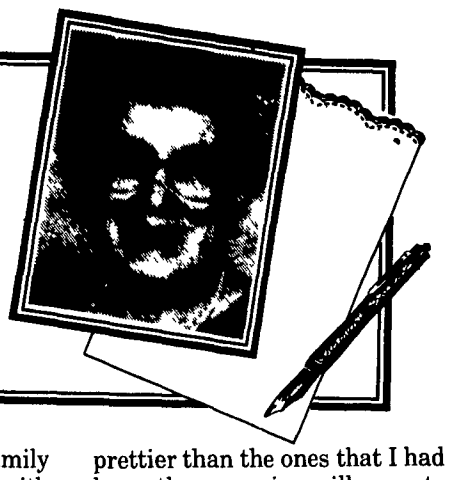
Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Our daughter and her family recently spent a few days with us. Her boys are three years old and four months old. Not only did the people come from Texas but so did all the equipment and toys needed to keep the children happy. We do still have our crib and so that is set up whenever a young grandchild visits.

The occasion for the visit was my husband's 80th birthday. His three brothers were all able to come also and join us for a meal at a local restaurant. Not all of our children could come but they telephoned him to express their wishes.

So, we had an opportunity to share our bountiful crop of asparagus. I also pulled rhubarb for whoever could use some. There is still a lot to be frozen for next winter. And, I must do more baking and use some.

We've been given several hanging baskets to put on the front porch. The bought ones are prettier than the ones that I had hung there so mine will move to the back porch. This spring I've been able to keep flowers on the kitchen table everyday and I was given a bought bouquet for the dining room when Bible Study is here on Wednesday.

The other week we went to a local shopping mall for a few items. What a job to find the right department for an electric clock and for a battery-operated pencil sharpener. You should wear comfortable shoes when you enter the large stores today as you must walk and walk. Despite everything that they have; there are a few things that we could not find. I needed corners for pictures to be put in a scrapbook and we had to go to a specialty store at another shopping center.

No wonder I prefer to stay at home and do without rather than compete with the traffic on the roads and in the stores.

Bone Research Helps Fight Silent Disease

If you interested in participating in a research study or in booking Emkey as a guest speaker, call the Bone Research Center at (610) 378-6553, for more details. Several different studies are conducted and the details are thoroughly explained. Participants of the study can drop out at any time.

Emkey said that The Bone Center is one of a few centers in the world that does the research. Many people are unaware that the Reading area has been the site of major research for breakthrough drugs such as Fosamax, which was approved for release in 1995. Studies show that using Fosamax results in a 50 percent reduction in fractures. In addition patients using Fosamax did not lose any height compared to large losses in the control group.

"It's a great opportunity for women. Their health care is carefully monitored. It costs nothing and it's an opportunity for women to contribute research that is beneficial to the health of their daughters and granddaughters," Emkey said of research participants.

Pat Purcell of the Bone Research Center explains research methods to a prospective participant. Health care is carefully monitored in the volunteers who participate in clinical studies of new drugs to stop the devastating effects of osteoporosis.

Daview Farm Is Thriving Center For Cows, Promotion And Family

Daview Farm in Kutztown is home for Luther and Teresa Davis and their children, Erica, former Berks County dairy princess; Gregory, 15; Aaron, 9; and Jillian, 5.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — "If you need a social life, don't be a dairy princess," Erica Rae Davis said.

Her words might sound like a deterrent to prospective dairy princess candidates, but Erica is one of the most staunch defenders of the dairy princess program.

"What you put into it is what you get out of it. You're only giving up your social life for a year to participate in a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. The rewards of the program go with you forever," Erica said.

After completing a year as the Berks County Dairy Princess, Erica knows the cost of wearing the crown and being a spokesperson for the industry.

A freshman at the Penn State Berks Campus, Erica took a lighter course load to accommodate dairy princess duties. She's taking summer classes to make up classes in hopes of transferring to Main Campus in January.

Ater achieving a degree in dairy and animal science and a minor in communications, Erica's ultimate goal is to work at the state or national level for the Holstein Association.

In the meantime, many of Erica's classmates know her as "Cow Lady."

The nickname didn't faze Erica, who took it as a compliment and used the publicity to tell classmates things about farming and dairy products of which they didn't know.

"Hardly anyone knew my real name," Erica said.

Go to one of the local fairs and you can almost always find the Davis family settled with their show cows near the end of the barn.

"We like it at the end because that is where most people like to stop and ask questions," Erica said.

She encourages visitors to take a turn at brushing a cow. She explains how cows need to have a calf before they can give milk.

The family, which includes parents Luther and Teresa, and siblings Gregory, 15; Aaron, 9; and Jillian, 5, have about 60 milking cows and 60 young stock — all registered Holsteins, 22 of which Erica owns. She received her first calf when she was four years old. The original calf grew to produce four heifers before birthing a bull. That established a sturdy foundation for Erica's growing herd.

Macy the cow is Erica's favorite bovine and is a 4-H project. Erica is both owner and breeder of the grand champion Holstein and won grand champion showman and reserve champion fitter with her. The 6-year-old is excellent in 1992-2E. The family also has an Astri bull proven in sire service. The 5-year-old bull is rated excellent '90.

"He likes to be a pet and gets quite jealous when we pay attention to the calves housed nearby," Erica said. The bull loves to be clipped.

The family lives on a 155-acre farm with 135 tillable acres put into corn and alfalfa. The Century Farm is owned by the Lester Miller family but the Davis family has lived on it for most of Erica's life and it is named Daview Farm. The herd belongs to the Davis family.

"We use only family labor so sometimes it's difficult to get everything done. But we want to stick to this size," Erica said. Most business decisions are decided by discussing it with the whole family.

"We believe in what we do. Our cows are our paycheck and we treat them with respect," Erica said.

The herd averages 24,200 pounds although a few have reached 30,000 pounds.

Erica admits that she and her dad are more prone to give cows a second chance than most other farmers might.

"Dad and I are really attached to the cows. Although we've seen lots of births, we experience the same feeling of wonder every time a calf is born," Erica said.

Growing up on the farm has taught Erica to accept the good with the bad, the sad times, and the happy ones.

"I grew up with the strong opinion that the dairy farm is a strong part of whom I am and always will be," she said.

Erica described herself as a former shy 8-year-old who was transformed into a communicator through involvement with 4-H, Junior Holstein, Dairy Bowl, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program.

"I was pushed by my mom—and I don't mean that in a negative way—to participate and get involved in those organizations," Erica said.

She spent five years as a dairy ambassador before being selected as county dairy princess.

As a member of the Dairy Bowl, Erica said that she learned to handle stress and compose herself in public.

"Practice makes perfect," Erica said. "And poise and composure enhances communication."

Poise and composure came in handily when Erica appeared on the PBS television channel to prepare cheesy scallopped potatoes.

Erica had read how the channel wanted potato recipes for a special feature on the show. Erica sent in a recipe and a few facts about herself and was lucky to be one of the few contestants selected to prepare their entries on camera.

"I felt really at ease. And the exposure was great. The program was aired three times with an estimated audience of 50,000 people each time," Erica said.

During her reign, Erica tried to find nonfarm activities in which to promote the dairy industries. One of these was the Blood Bank, where in addition to donating blood, she handed out cheese, crackers, and dairy recipes to participants.

She also made 115 classroom appearances. In addition, the Davis family offers its farm for dairy tours.

"Kids are so impressionable. It teaches them good habits that hopefully will continue through life," she said of the importance of teaching kids about the importance of including dairy products in a healthy diet.

Erica said that teachers often asked questions and told her that they learned a lot through her presentation that they did not know about dairy products before.

Erica credits her mom for being creative and coming up with original ideas in teaching dairy promotion to both kids and adults.

Her mom said, "I watch the reactions of the children and build on it with other ideas."

In the classroom, Erica uses two balloons and says, "If we had no bones, we'd have no form at all. So stand tall and get the calcium you need, because if you don't, you will develop osteoporosis. Your bones will become so weak that even a sneeze can make a bone break." With that, Erica uses a pin to pop the balloon—a sound effect that leaves a lasting impression.

In classroom presentations, Erica plays "Mary Cowkins," a character that is a spinoff of Mary Poppins. Instead of Mary Poppins famous work, Mary Cowkins teaches children to say, "Superincalciumfablisticexperalidelicious" through repetition. The word works great in catching kid's attention and helping them to attach the word to good-tasting dairy products.

After completing a school promotion, teachers often say to Erica, "You're going to study elementary education, right?"

Although Erica isn't planning on a career in education, she does enjoy participating in the America Reads program and tutors Head Start kids during summer months.

Teresa said that watching Erica fulfilling dairy princess duties has actually enhanced her own communication skills in dairy promotion.

"It has helped me become more fluent in talking to kids on their own level," Teresa said.

Mom is the one who often explains on-farm activities to the approximately 300 children who tour the farm annually.

She is also the official photographer, known to stop the tractor in the middle of a job in order to run for her camera.

Erica is amazed at the many adults who do not realized that calcium is available in low fat dairy products.

"I like milk out of the tank. I like it with lots of cream," Erica said. However, she finds the majority of females are concerned about fat, so she tells them that low-fat dairy products can give them all the calcium they need.

"Getting calcium from dairy products is more effective than taking a calcium pill, which gives you all the calcium at one time and much is lost because it is absorbed into the bloodstream.

"Besides, getting calcium from dairy products is a lot more fun. Top your vegetables with butter and cheese. Milkshakes give you a double dose of calcium because you have both milk and ice cream in it," Erica said.

She had lots of favorite promotions, but one of the most recent was the Maryland Women's Fest.

"We took 900 pictures of people with a milk moustache," she said. She divulged the secret that whipped cream is smeared on for a moustache since milk doesn't leave a vivid enough mark for pictures.

This summer, Erica is hostessing in a restaurant, where the news has spread about her dairy princess title. It's another great advertisement that Erica uses to the advantage of the dairy industry by telling folks the truth about dairy products and farming.

When she is home, Erica is responsible for feeding the baby calves morning and afternoon. She sprays the feet of the cows with a special mixture to reduce strawberry warts.

She also is her dad's relief milker—the only one he trusts.

He went 13 years without missing a milking. "I broke his streak by finishing milking before he got back from fieldwork," Erica said. Instead of expressing gratefulness that she finished the milking in 1½ hours instead of the normal 2 hours, her father was skeptical of her ability to do everything properly. "We'll see how many cows get mastitis," he mumbled.

The cows did not get mastitus, and Erica gained her father's approval as "the only relief milker I trust."

This year, with a bit of prodding from Erica and her mom, her dad will travel to the Dairy Expo.

"Mom and I went last year," Erica said of the event that amazed and challenged her. She borrowed a calf from an exhibitor so that she could participate in showmanship.

"It was exciting to show a top show animal, and I'm friends of the family ever since."

At Dairy Expo, Erica had two animals in the showcase featuring different daughters of sires, a Bellewood daughter and a Astri daughter.

"It was exciting that so many people got to see animals from our farm," Erica said with obvious pride. Despite the long truck ride out and back and fitting and barn crew exposure, the cows came back without a scratch on them.

Luther's purpose in going to Dairy Expo is primarily to see the results of cow genetics firsthand in order to improve the breeding in their stock.

While cows are a prominent focus of the family, Teresa is quick to point out that the the kids are the couple's main focus. When it comes to raising kids, Teresa said, "Be honest and fair. When folks come to buy stock, be honest all the way through so that others need never worry about being swindled. The best way to teach kids is to have them watch their parents doing business."

More of Erica's classmates know her as the "Cow Lady" than by her first name. Erica is proud of the nickname and uses every opportunity to educate the nonfarming community with farm life and dairy products.

Going through the teen years and being heavily involved in dairy promotion leaves no time for getting in trouble.

"We encourage Erica to be in a lot of promotions. The dairy princess promotion is a really good promotion for dairy products," Teresa said.

Dad has also gotten a few emotional rewards from his daughter's involvement in the industry. He said, "When other dairy farmers comment on her speech, it gives me a proud, good feeling."

While Erica and her mom were on the road promoting dairy products, her brothers took care of her chores in the barn.

Erica was part of the team to win the state Dairy Bowl and place second in the division. In 1995, the team won at the national level.

Cats are prolific on the farm. Sixty cats—all named and easily differentiated by sight. The felines have come to the farm in some unusual ways. One delivery happened when a tractor trailor load of sawdust was delivered to the farm. Two kittens fell off the truck and were immediately adopted by a mother cat.

"We spend lots of time with cats. They are great stress relievers," Teresa said.

Erica collects stuffed cows. Her mother collects other cow paraphernalia.

What To Do When Food Turns Moldy

Mold tells us better than words when we have kept leftovers too long. Molds are living symbols of spoilage and decay. They work so quickly that it takes a bit of ingenuity to dispose of some foods before molds do.

Molds are actually fungi with thread-like roots that spread below the surface of food. A stalk extends above the surface. Spores at the end of the stalk spread the mold from place to place. They give mold its distinctive color.

Molds generally prefer a warm, humid environment, but, as we all know, some grow very well in refrigerators. Molds develop more quickly on foods with high sugar or salt content, which is why mold often appears on jams, jellies, and salt-cured meats.

No all molds are bad. Penicillin, a well-known antibiotic, is produced from two molds. Molds also help in the production (especially the flavoring) of some wines and cheeses.

A clean refrigerator can retard mold growth. Now is a good time to thoroughly clean your refrigerator. Toss out old food, and clean the refrigerator walls and racks with a solution of one tablespoon of baking soda dissolved in one quart of warm water. Check the temperature in the refrigerator to make sure it is below 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Always inspect foods before you buy them. Be especially careful when buying cheese, fresh fruits and vegetables, and bakery products.

Even with the cleanest refrigerator and your best efforts at the supermarket, you food still may be subject to mold growth. If you see mold when you first open a newly purchased package or container and suspect it was there when you bought it, you owe it to the store management to take the product back, or at the very least, call the store. Otherwise, the store's management may never know it has a storage problem.

If you see a bit of mold on hard or firm foods such as hard cheese, firm-type fruits, such as pears, and smoked turkey, it is safe to remove one inch around and below the mold spot with a knife. Take care not to touch the mold with your knife.

Molds spread quickly on soft foods, such as bread, cake, cottage cheese, and jam. If you see more than a speck of mold growth on these foods, the best advice is to throw them out.

When in doubt about a food's safety, it is best to throw it out. Although we never want to be wasteful with food, it is silly to threaten our health by eating spoiled foods.

Whatever you do, it is best not to taste or even sniff mold. Although it will not cause food poisoning, it can lead to respiratory problems or allergic reactions for sensitive individuals. Source: Colorado Cooperative Extension.

Pennsylvania Streams and Lakes — Great for Father's Day - June 21

Stream MAP of Pennsylvania

Why every fisherman needs this map

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters...many of them overlooked. From the Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This 3 foot by 5 foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes. That's almost three times the earth's circumference!

Professor Higbee's STREAMS ®

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to the landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

The experts had always told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

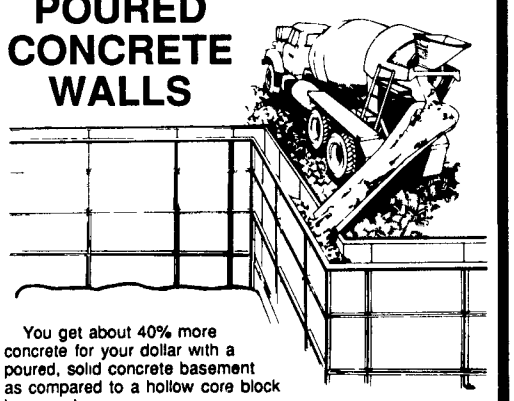
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Planning kitchens for workers as well as the work done there are functional and create an atmosphere for easy preparation, cooking, and serving of meals. A well-planned kitchen can help eliminate the frustration of finding and getting supplies and utensils by locating them in logical places. Work can be accomplished in comfortable positions because of the height of the work surfaces, the sink, range, and oven have been adjusted to your body requirements.

The first step in designing a functional kitchen is to develop a personalized work center and then arrange it in an effective layout. A center is a place where you can do a particular type or work: Everything you need for the task is together (equipment, supplies, and utensils), storage space is provided for these things, and there is work space.

A center provides a way to organize. They key is to plan for function so you can perform particular tasks. For example, you will need a place for wet work—a sink center, which includes a source of water, a place for drainage, a work basin, and a storage area. Storage space is needed for storing dishwashing supplies and equipment and for non-refrigerated foods such as potatoes and onions, initially prepared at the sink. In addition, the knives, peeler, and cutting board used to prepare the food at the sink and the pans in which they are cooked should be kept in that area. The counter to the right and left of the sink should provide space for preparing food and for holding dirty dishes and clean, rinsed dishes.

Generally kitchens have at least five centers for the different types of work for meal preparation and cleanup:

1. A sink center—to provide water and drainage for food preparation and cleanup.

2. A range center—to provide heat for cooking. If you have a two-piece range, you will need an oven center and a surface-cooking center.

3. A mix center—to provide facilities for assembling and mixing food.

4. A refrigerator center—to provide refrigeration of perishable supplies.

5. A china center—to provide equipment for serving and eating food.

Although the place or places where you eat are not centers, you should consider them as you plan your kitchen. The dining area may be in the kitchen or another room, or in more than one room.

If you have a microwave oven, it may be placed in a separate center or combined with another center. Your menus and how you use the oven will make a difference in your planning. Centers save effort and time because you have organized the supplies and equipment where you first use them and you have provided appropriate storage and work space. Centers reduce the distance you walk since you make many trips between the appliances, counter, and storage space. If these are within reach of one another, you can work more continuously with fewer changes of location and less searching.

Once the function or purpose of a workplace is decided, you can then determine the supplies, utensils, and small tools you need for preparing foods, for serving them, and for cleaning up. These decisions are an important part of planning a center.

The amount of storage and ways to make everything easy to see, reach, grasp, and replace will be determined by the items needed for the special type of work to be done.

The amount of work surface at each center will be related primarily to the work to be carried on since some tasks require more space than others. The quantity and kind of food prepared and the number of persons served are a consideration for some centers.

The height of the work surface and some appliances will be related to the elbow height of the main user and the type of work done. The work level should always be lower than the worker's elbow height

The design of the appliance also affects one's ease of work. This is especially true of the sink and range because they are used most often. Remember too, that a functional kitchen should be designed for the individual who uses it most, and should be adapted for handicapped persons with special needs.

Farm Is Cat Heaven For 60 Cats

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Cat lovers are in cat heaven when they visit the Davis family in Kutztown.

Sixty felines of all colors and markings roam the farmland. The cats and kittens are healthy, plump bundles of fur that are pampered and cuddled despite the family's busyness of caring for 140 Holsteins and farming 135 tillable acres.

Amazingly, each of the 60 felines has a name and is easily differentiated from its peers.

"Each cat has its only territory," Aaron said of the ground the cats cover in obliterating mice. The family keeps close tabs on the whereabouts of each cat and notices that the felines are as reliable as clockwork in reporting to "mouse duty."

"At 4 o'clock every afternoon this one comes out of the meadow, and this one comes out of the field," Aaron explained.

According to 6-year-old Jillian, the cats follow the cows into the barn and snuggle atop them for a snooze.

The whole family—including parents Luther and Teresa—spend time playing with the cats. "It's a good stress reliever," Jillian's mom said of the enjoyable way to relax after a hard day's work on the farm.

On the second floor of the barn, Jillian and Aaron have a play area.

In addition to the cats, Jillian has a horse—well, not exactly. Her horse Pegasus is an imaginery horse that goes everywhere with her. She was holding tight to the reins to keep him from running away while telling a visitor about her horse.

Jillian takes dancing lessons to study tap and ballet. She likes to help her older sister Erica feed the calves.

Not all the fun happens in the barn or outside. Inside the house, Aaron, a gifted pianist can often be heard playing music. Again, demonstrating her vivid imagination, Jillian plays drums, which she devised by tapping on an old table.

Aaron also likes to paint and built things with his set of K'Nex. When his sister Erica was Berks County dairy princess, Aaron and his older brother Gregory took over her barn chores. Now Aaron likes to be in charge of feeding the calves. He has three cows of his own, which he named after the Japanese exchange students who stayed with the family.

Older brother Gregory plays volleyball on the high school team and is a 9th grade student at Kutztown High School, where he participates in FFA. On Sunday, Gregory can always be found listening to the car races broadcast on the radio.

Daview Farm is one big happy family of children, cows, cats, and dogs. While the barn thrives with cows, cats, and dogs, home is domain for the family.

"The most important part of our farm is the kids—not the cows or cats—although we are proud of what we accomplished here," Teresa said. "We wanted to do everything we can to get them started on the right foot."

Aaron, 9, and Jillian, 5, play with a few of the 60 cats on the Davis farm. Each cat is named and easily identified by all family members.

Where do fruit flies come from?
Those pesky flying insects have a knack for showing up right when your bananas go from ripe to over-ripe.
Our entomology friends at Ohio State think fruit flies hitch a ride into your house as eggs on the surface of fruit or vegetables. (Don't worry — you won't get sick if you eat them.) Fruit flies are also so small they can fly through most screens.
Over-ripe fruit, along with things such as standing sink water, vegetable peelings that didn't make it down the disposal, and empty, uncleaned food cans in your recycling bin, are magnets to fruit flies. If you don't eliminate these sources of food for the fruit flies, they will multiply at a very rapid rate. That's because a single female lays about 500 eggs, and the life cycle is about 8 to 10 days in warm weather. So, every 10 days, an adult female lays eggs. Her offspring, in turn, lay even more eggs in another 10 days.
Fruit flies aren't all bad, though. Scientists use them for genetic studies because they have such a short life span and have so many offspring. They are even used for experiments in high school science classes. And, if you live in the northern parts of the United States, you won't have to worry about seeing any until next spring — fruit flies can't survive the cold northern temperatures. They migrate north each spring from their vacation homes in the warm, sunny South.

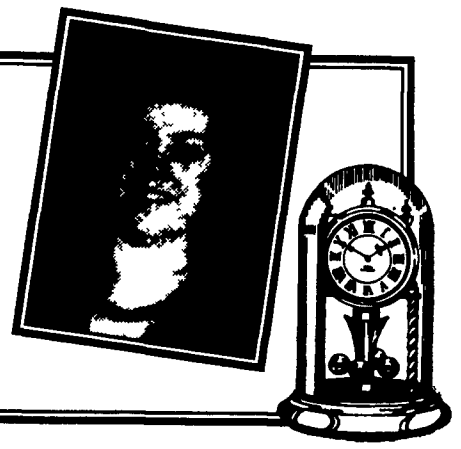
Taking Time by Rebecca Escott



Take Time for a Child

This weekend many families will be getting together to celebrate Memorial Day—putting flowers on graves, watching parades, having picnics, opening pools, and kicking off the summer season. It's a perfect recipe for adult-child fun!

Recently I was reminded of how desperately children need caring adults around them. I reviewed a study originally released in 1989 by Peterson and Peterson. For 10 years they tracked adolescent boys who had committed several serious crimes between the ages of 14 and 18.

The researchers wanted to know how many, if any, of these boys would have successfully joined society 10 years later. They checked how many of these juvenile offenders by the time they were 24-28 years old had gone without an arrest in the past three years and had filed a tax return. The result? Seventeen percent had.

Granted, that's not a huge number. But some of those kids who seemed really at risk when they were younger "made it." So Peterson and Peterson asked, "What made the difference for these guys?" Eighty percent named a specific adult—Mrs. Johnson, Coach T., Grandma Wilson, etc.

All it took to "save" these kids from a cycle of criminal of activities and disappointments was one adult expecting them to succeed, believing in them, and continuing to provide positive opportunities. Wow! One adult.

Maybe your life is not as dramatic as that, but you could probably name adults that who have stepped in and provided important supplemental encouragement in ways that parents can't. Some of the people who made a difference in my life were a camp counselor, a 4-H leader, an English teacher, a youth group leader, a best friend's mom.

Sometimes, we make the mistake of thinking that it takes special talents or a lot of money to do something that would matter to children. Wrong. I listen to radio announcements in our community where our children make requests for attention through "Big Brother, Big Sister" program. What do they want? Someone to talk to, someone to take them to the mall, someone to shoot basketball with, someone to play games with.

Children need adults and "big brothers/sisters" to care about them, to miss them if they aren't at school, to notice when they are sitting alone crying, to give a hug, to be in the audience at their school program.

Consider ways that you might make a difference to a child who seems "at risk." Could you be a phone pal, calling them when they get home from school? Could you host a story-hour for kids at your home? Could you rock some infants in the hospital or at day care? Could you "adopt" a boy on the little league team whose dad lives in another town? Could you drive a van full of teens to the state park for hiking? Some very ordinary actions taken over time can produce extraordinary results in children.

As you think about Memorial Day, and making memories that last beyond this generation, consider taking time not only for your own children, but at least one child outside your family. Your caring could change a life.

When Gayle Ditzler felt so sick she could barely move, she vowed that if she ever started feeling better, she would devote her time to telling others about the silent dangers of lyme disease. Although not completely symptom-free, Gayle has made a remarkable comeback and tells others how she is combatting the illness.

Lyme Disease Almost Destroys Gayle's Life

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WERNERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — When Gayle Ditzler turned 29 years old, she looked the picture of health. She had been healthy her entire life. Then suddenly she began to experience phantom pains that grew progressively worse in almost every part of her body.

More and more, she found herself sitting in the doctor's office. She had her gall bladder removed, bursitis in the arm, hair loss, lower rib pain, and all her lymph nodes hurt. She experienced blurred vision, equilibrium imbalances, mood swings, sleep disturbances. . . . The doctor ordered almost every test heard of — including EKG and blood tests — all of which came back showing no sign of illness.

"I could barely function," Gayle said. "My family doctor finally said, 'Over the years I've seen a lot of people like you and they didn't end up in good places.'"

Gayle was crushed. "I knew what he was referring to. He thought I was crazy," Gayle said.

Although her husband was supportive, he, too, was becoming frustrated by the seeming inconsistency of Gayle's complaints versus tests that did not show any medical basis for them.

"The pain became so severe I wanted to kill myself," Gayle said. "Every muscle hurt, then my joints began to hurt. I couldn't see or think staight."

Gayle could no longer drive a car. She could barely dress and feed her daughter, now six years old, before collapsing on the sofa.

Gayle was convinced she wasn't crazy. She suspected that she had lyme disease, which is transmitted by the bite of the Ixodes dammini tick. But when Gayle finally convinced the doctor to test for lyme disease, the test results were negative.

Gayle's case is not an unusual scenario for those with lyme disease, which is the fastest growing epidemic in the U.S. Tests results are often negative. Because symptoms vary greatly, it is difficult for doctors to diagnose.

Eventually Gayle heard of a New Jersey doctor who specializes in lyme disease. Dr. Praful Shaks of Elmwood Park, N.J., did more extensive testing, which showed that Gayle had lyme disease. According to Shaks, lyme disease is difficult to diagnose for the following reasons:

- More than half of lyme disease victims do not remember being bitten by a tick (a tick bite does not hurt because of the anesthetic the tick injects upon both puncturing and withdrawing).
- More than 60 percent of victims do no exhibit a telltale rash.
- The time lapse between the tick bite and emergence of symptoms can be weeks to months because of the spirochete's slow replication and ability to lie dormant in the nervous system, and can lead to chronic infection.

Gayle has been on oral antibodics for one year, after being fed antibotics intravenously. Her blood is tested every other month and shows improvement. She takes a multivitamin and 2000 units of vitamin C daily. She drinks acidophilus milk.

Gayle is feeling amazingly better, although she said she still has some pain in her head and sometimes feels temporarily disoriented. "It feels like a lyme fog in which the head feels like it's stuffed with cotton," she said.

"But my doctor promises that I will get completely better. The pain in my joints and muscles and throughout my body is gone, so that gives me hope that symptoms in my head will also be gone," she said.

"I always said that if I ever start feeling better, I'm going to educate others about Lyme disease," Gayle said. She has been speaking to some groups, recently at the Berks County Extension Spring Awareness Day.

If left untreated, lyme disease affects the central nervous system.

Lyme disease bacteria is likened to a thief that disguises itself and changes chemical form. It's a tricky disease in which the bacteria reproduces itself every 11-14 days.

Some doctors believe that a person affected with Lyme disease can improve with treatment but will never be totally free from symptoms. Dr. Shaks disagrees.

"He promises me that I will feel better," Gayle said.

The Ditzlers have a lovely home in a heavily wooded area in Trexler Mountain in Berks County. Formerly Gayle loved working in the yard and watching the deer nearby. But since her exposure to lyme disease, Gayle admits that she is paranoid about the outdoors.

She will go on the deck, swim in the pool, and walk on the macadam driveway, but not on the grass. A path through the woods leads to a neighboring home. Gayle no longer allows her daughter to take the path to see her friend, because she fears exposure to the ticks from deer in the area.

Deer ticks can be a carrier of lyme disease. The deer tick is only about the size of a pinhead when fully grown and is difficult to detect on the body. The wood tick, which is twice as lare as a deer tick, has white marks near the head, and is unlikely to transmit lyme disease.

She explained the benefits of milk's natural calcium over calcium supplements. Her skit was designed for pre-school children and depicted a tea (milk) party. Bobbi Jo's speech, entitled "Lactose Intolerance" explained how lactose intolerance folks, including herself, can enjoy milk and milk products. Her skit, designed for elementary age children, found her talking about the importance of milk in our diets while her favorite cow, Flower was being milked.

Robert Hockenbrock served as master of ceremonies and greetings were received from Arlene Wilbur, associate director for Pennsylvania Dairy Princess & Promotion Services.

Former dairy princesses in attendance were recognized. Present were Karen (Shertzer) Diffenderfer (1986), Anita Faulkner (1992), and Melissa Hostler (1994).

Volunteers Raise $100,000 For Disaster Response

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co) – With a lot of determination, hard work, and cooperation of the Brethren Church Middle Pennsylvania Ministries of Disaster Response & the Morrison's Cove Home, more than $53,000 was raised last year for disaster

Held at the Morrison's Cove Memorial Park, co-chairman Jack and Marianna Baker hope, when the final tallies are in, that figure will double this year

Doubling was made easier by a huge donation of 10 tractor trailer loads of Rubber Maid products Seven of those truckloads were sold over the winter months out of an empty Giant Eagle store in Martinsburg with no heat "We raised $60,000 before the auction even started," Marianna said

The idea for a Disaster Response auction/craft/quilt sale was born when Jack and Marianna were appointed chairman of the Middle Pennsylvania District Disaster Team

Disaster team members work alongside the Red Cross and Salvation Army when a disaster occurs anywhere in the country "And we never want for a disaster," Marianna says

As chairmen, it was the Baker's job to find a team of volunteers to accompany them to a disaster site "However," Marianna says, "We were only given $6,000 to meet the expense of the entire group "

"This meant we had to ask volunteers to volunteer not only their time (usually vacation time from their jobs) but also all of the expense money including transportation, meals, and lodging It was virtually an impossible job "

"Jack and I decided we had to raise some money on our own and started looking around other areas." That's when they discovered the Disaster Auction in Shenandoah and two good friends, Carl and Hilda Ruff, who revealed not only what to do, but what not to do

"Knowing the mistakes that could be made up front was extremely valuable information," says Marianna. "It would have taken us years to learn by trail and error "

The fund raising consists of four separate events Brethren farmers are asked to donate livestock for an auction which brings amazingly high bids. One tiny goat at this year's event brought $465 when it was repeatedly resold.

It was finally purchased by state Representative Dick Hess who gave it to a little girl who had fallen in love with the playful kid.

In 1997, the livestock brought a total of $18,000. "We can't come up with a final figure for 1998 until several months later," Marianna says "Money keeps pouring in for several months following "

Livestock is sold on Friday and on Saturday, the big event is a quilt/craft auction

Eighty-five comforters, quilts, and wall hangings were donated by churches, church members, and friends from throughout the district In addition, crafts from local craftsmen or businesses are also donated Helen Ferry, Morrison's Cove, is in charge of the crafts

A third part of the event consists of craft vendors who donate a portion of their income back to Disaster Response Churches and other nonprofit organizations offer food including hot soups, homemade pies and cakes, and various types of sandwiches. Tom and Joan Dibert of Bedford chair this division.

The Rubbermaid donation was like the icing on the cake. Learning of the Disaster efforts, last year Rubbermaid of Lancaster offered to donate all the Baker's could carry in their car for the sale

"These are discontinueds and seconds," Marianna explains. "But, we take the good with the bad and are quite grateful."

It was during the winter of 1997 that Rubbermaid called to offer an additional 10 tractor trailer loads of their products. Seven of those were sold over the winter months. Contents of one truckload was offered with the vendor items and two more will be sold at a future date.

Included are brooms, mops, buckets, clothes hampers, waste cans, and various kitchen items Since all items are donated, prices are attention getting.

Transportation for the Rubbermaid is largely and voluntarily provided by members of the Brethren Church.

Another generous donation comes from the Blank Book Company which donates large amounts of notebooks and paper to be sold at a nominal cost.

"It's a satisfying event for everyone concerned," Marianna says.

"We have a lot less trouble finding volunteers when they know their expenses will be paid. And, it's not too much to ask. Most of these people take time off work to go help someone in need."

The Middle District Disaster Response will be off to South Fork, North Dakota, in July where they are helping that flood-stricken community to rebuild.

Marianna and Jack Baker with Helen Ferry, crafts chairman, are setting up a turning rack for displaying quilts during the auction. The turning rack was another donated item.

Mushroom, Slime Molds And Artillery Fungus On Mulch Beds

With wet and significant rainfall the past several weeks 'mushrooms' and slime molds and other fungus are appearing in mulch beds and lawns. Mulched areas are consisting mainly of tree bark and wood chips.

Under wet, humid condition the fungi that naturally inhabit soils tend to produce mushrooms. This occurs with the addition of moisture. Usually various sizes and colors of mushrooms appear in mulched landscape beds or poorly maintained turf.

All are harmless to surrounding plants. Their toxicity to humans prevents their use as a food source for anyone or anything.

Wet conditions also bring out growth of slime molds. These brightly colored (yellow, blue, violet, red, or grey) slimy growths appear on the surface of mulched beds. Slime molds are not harmful to other plants in the garden, but if the growth is extensive enough, they may grow over and smother small recently planted annual plants.

Control mushrooms and slime molds mechanical by picking, raking or washing with a strong stream of water. No spray materials are recommended to prevent these under the wet conditions this spring.

To limit the occurrence of mushrooms and slime molds, eliminate some of the conditions required for the fungi to grow. Keep the surface of the mulch stirred with a rake, or keep as dry as possible, and increase air circulation in the area to promote drying of the mulched areas. This may mean fewer plants in any given area.

The artillery fungus may also occur later this spring Damp conditions cause this soil fungus to shoot its sticky spore mass a considerable distance towards light-colored surfaces. Vinyl or aluminum homes are likely targets. The spore mass is difficult to impossible to remove without significant damage to the house's siding. Cars in parking lots with mulched beds also may be damaged.

Mulches that have a large percentage of wood fiber rather than bark often show more of the fungus. The fiber serves as a growth medium for the fungus. The artillery fungus cannot be controlled by using a pesticide. In problem areas, replace mulched beds with an inorganic mulch especially next to light-colored structures. Use only pure mulches such as pine, Douglas fir or cedar that contain little if any wood fiber. Or, replace the upper inch of old, existing mulch with a new layer of fresh mulch each season. Only keep a 2-to-4-inch layer of mulch available for the fungus.

These wet weather fungi growths are generally more of a nuisance than any serious threat to your garden and landscape. As soon as weather becomes dry and warmer these problems generally disappear.

For more fungi that attacks your mulch, call your Extension Office for the handout "What is Growing in My Landscape Mulch?"

Folic Acid

(NAPS)—Folic acid is a B vitamin that everyone needs to help cells grow and divide It's especially important for women who may become pregnant

Taken before and during early pregnancy, folic acid, also known as folate, dramatically reduces the chances of having a baby born with birth defects of the spine and brain. These defects (also known as neural tube defects) can cause severe disabilities and in some cases death.

For women of childbearing years, the U.S. Pharmacopeia, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Food and Drug Administration and the March of Dimes all recommend 400 mcg of folic acid daily.

According to the March of Dimes, seven out of ten women do not begin taking folic acid until they learn they are pregnant, which is usually eight to ten weeks into the pregnancy

By this time it is too late to reduce the risk of birth defects of the brain or spine

It is possible to get folic acid by consuming foods such as green leafy vegetables, cereal and cereal products; and citrus fruits and juices Certain fully fortified breakfast cereals have 100 percent of the recommended daily amount of folic acid. Many women, however, prefer to take their folic acid in tablet form or a multivitamin supplement

Meet Calcium Requirements

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The National Institute of Medicine has increased its recommended daily calcium requirements for all age groups older than age 8. And that means most consumers should be drinking a lot more milk, or at least seeking dietary alternatives containing calcium, says a nutritionist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The old nutritional guidelines, which were called Recommended Dietary Allowances, were re-evaluated by the National Institute and adjusted upward," explains J. Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science. "The new guidelines, called Dietary Reference Intakes, have significantly raised the requirements for older adults."

Brown lists the new requirements in milligrams by age group, along with the equivalent milk serving required to meet the correct level.

Age	Old Level	New Level	Glasses of milk needed
Children 9-18	1,200 mg*	1,300 mg	From 4 to 4⅓
Adults 19-50	800 mg	1,000 mg	From 2⅔ to 3⅓
Adults 50-plus	800 mg	1,200 mg	From 2⅔ to 4

*The old recommendations were 800 mg for ages 7-10 and 1200 mg for ages 11-18.
The old recommendations were 1000 gm for ages 19-24 and 800 mg for ages 25-50.

Brown says if followed, the new requirements could most benefit the diets of older Americans, pointing out that one 8-oz. glass of milk contains 8 to 10 grams of protein. "If you're drinking four glasses of milk a day, that's 40 grams of protein," Brown explains. "The daily protein requirement for an older adult is 50 to 65 grams per day."

Brown adds that the Dietary Reference Intakes also call for increased daily requirements for Vitamin D, a nutrient that helps the body metabolize calcium efficiently. Brown says those age 50 to 70 must double their intake from 200 international units to 400 to meet those guidelines. Those older than 70 must triple their intake to 600 international units.

"People used to get most of their Vitamin D from sunshine, but as more people adopt sedentary lifestyles, they have to look into other sources, such as milk fortified with Vitamin D," Brown says.

Brown suggests several calcium-laden alternatives to milk for those who are lactose intolerant or just don't like drinking milk.

Cheese: One ounce of Swiss cheese contains about 270 mg of calcium. An ounce of cheddar has about 200 mg. "An ounce of cheese isn't very big, so this is a really efficient method," Brown says. "In some cases lactose intolerant individuals can digest cheese more easily than other products."

Yogurt: One cup of any kind of yogurt contains about 400 mg of calcium.

Calcium-fortified Orange Juice: "Consumers should look at the label, but many of the fortified juices have about 300 mg per serving," Brown says. "The citric acid in the juice allows the body to absorb the calcium more easily."

Tofu: Some types of tofu are made with calcium sulfate, which provides about 300 mg in a half-cup. "This is a very good calcium source for vegetarians, but consumers should look at the label to make sure it was made with calcium sulfate," Brown advises.

Dark green leafy vegetables: The best vegetables are kale, chard, mustard and other greens. "The calcium in leafy greens is released more easily if the vegetables are frozen," Brown says. However, spinach is not a good calcium source. Its calcium is tied up in an organic complex that can't be digested.

Fish: Brown says tinned sardines and mackerel, as well as canned salmon, contain calcium. Canned salmon is a good source of calcium if you mash and eat the bones.

Cereals: Some ready-to-eat cereals are fortified with calcium. Brown estimates the value to be about 50 mg per serving without the addition of fluid milk.

Regardless of the product, consumers must read the Nutrition Facts panel to really see what they are getting. "Remember, the percentage of calcium listed on the Nutrition Facts panel is based on 1000 mg of calcium," Brown explains. "Young adults and those over 50 will need more than 100 percent of the daily value for calcium."

Quilt Care And Storage

PHILADELPHIA (Philadelphia Co.) – Quilts are admired for their beauty and provide a function in the home as well. They are valued for many reasons including age, design and sentiment. With proper care and a certain amount of caution, you can preserve a treasured heirloom or insure the life span of a well-used quilt. It is important to know that there is a distinction between the preservation care given by a museum staff and general care that can be handled in the home. Both the museum staff and the homeowner share similar concerns. In order to prevent undue damage from cleaning, storage and display both must develop a system of protective housekeeping.

The way you clean a quilt depends on its age, condition and fiber content. If you have a quilt which is over 50 years old or one that is showing signs of wear, it is best to have a trained conservator clean or mend the quilt. Generally wool, rayon, and silk quilts should be dry cleaned while cotton and linen should be wet cleaned or washed, provided that the dyes are fast and the filling or padding is also washable. Dry cleaning and wet cleaning should always be handled by a reputable cleaner who has experience with perishable materials. If you have a combination of fibers, a glazed fabric or a fancy construction such as velvet or brocade, consult your cleaner to determine the cleaning method.

A very sturdy, newer quilt might be able to withstand laundering in the washer and dryer but this laundering method is seldom recommended. But for sturdy quilts that receive everyday wear the following steps are advisable:

•Make sure your dyes are fast by putting a few drops of water on a small area and blotting with a white blotter. You may have to test more than one spot, depending on your design and any repairs that have been made.

•If the dyes are fast use a neutral detergent in a large tub of warm water. A bathtub allows you to gently agitate the quilt, let the cleaning solution drain, and then let in new rinse water without straining the fibers. Make sure the detergent is thoroughly rinsed out. Squeeze out all excess water and gently lift the quilt out.

•It is best to dry the quilt outside on a clean sheet or towel. If this is not possible use a grid of clothesline under the quilt that will evenly distribute the weight to avoid stress on the stitching and fabric. Do not expose to sunlight directly.

If the quilt needs mending it should be done by a good seamstress. A hand-sewn quilt should always be repaired by hand, and if fabrics are worn away, or are torn, they should be strengthened by reweaving or darning. If replacement is necessary, be sure that the contemporary replacement fabric resembles the original. Bindings often become worn first and it spruces up your quilt to recover frayed edges with hand stitching. Keep the original edge for documentation.

Many quilts look handsome hung on a wall. Here one of the most important considerations is to distribute the weight evenly so that the quilt does not tear or weaken. It is recommended that a sleeve be made along the top back of the quilt to house a wooden or metal rod. The quilt can then be hung on prepared wall supports.

Velcro tape can also be fastened to the back of the sleeve and pressed to the wall. Old and delicate quilts would need to be handled slightly differently. Another backing can be sewn to an older quilt and basted to the front, thereby giving it overall support. In general it isn't a good idea to hang these older and more fragile quilts.

Lighting must be considered when displaying your quilts since light can cause textiles to dry out or fade. Do not hang your quilt in the path of direct sunlight. Blinds can be drawn to cut down on the amount of light. Both sunlight and fluorescent lighting can be filtered by the use of ultra violet shields. Incandescent lighting should be kept at quite a distance from the quilt.

You should also position your quilt so temperature and humidity are somewhat controlled. Avoid displaying your quilt on a damp wall. Since both humidity and pollution cause deterioration, it is a good idea to limit your display time-especially if the quilt is old or worn. You might choose to store your quilt and this must be done correctly to avoid unnecessary deterioration.

To effectively preserve textile fibers, one must consider the environment in which they are stored. Here a combination of common sense and a knowledge of the most common methods available for preventing or minimizing the degradation of fibers is necessary. First make sure your quilt is clean before you store it. Then choose a place where temperature, light and humidity can be regulated. Never use a plastic bag for storage since textiles need to breathe and an excess of humidity may accumulate.

Ideally, a bedspread should be hung over a wooden or aluminum rod or in the case of single layered, finely quilted pieces rolled on a tube. Both the rods and the tube should be covered with an acid free barrier. Then cover the quilt with clean 100 percent cotton sheeting and store it out of direct sunlight. The quilt should not be in direct contact with wood. If you plan to use a cedar chest for storage, line it with acid free paper.

Since many people do not have the space to roll or hang large quilts and they are too large to store flat, they must fold them. These folds must be loose and padded with acid free paper so that the fibers are not strained. Some experts recommend refolding every few months to prevent permanent creases. But be sure to clean your hands thoroughly before handling since your fingers contain natural oils that can leave unsightly stains. To fend off insects you may want to use a medicinal herb called southern wood or place moth crystals in a muslim bag. Make sure your moth crystals do not contain napthal and locate them above the quilt so the fumes drift upward.

With the proper care you can continue to use and enjoy your quilt. In the process of caring for it you will probably also develop a greater appreciation of quiltmaking and its history.

TIPS:

The way you clean a quilt depends on its age, condition and fiber content.

A hand-sewn quilt should always be repaired by hand, and if fabrics are worn away, or torn, they should be strengthened by reweaving or darning.

If you fold a quilt for storage, make sure the folds are loose and pad them with acid-free paper.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 held its April meeting in Pat Lueck's beautiful home. Attending were 17 members and two guests. Roll call was answered by naming a favorite restaurant. Because all members are excellent cooks with many having served 60,000 meals during 60 years, eating in a restaurant is a special night out.

Martha Stover, president, called the meeting to order. Susi Wissler had devotions. The program was provided by Nancy Wiker of the Lancaster County Extension Servie. She spoke on "Food Facts and Fantasies." Wiker discussed the need for calcium and sources of supply in foods and supplements. Safety food handling from store to table was also taught.

Five members who became 80 years old were honored with a beautiful pin.

A bus trip is planned for June 9. Seats are still available. Call Lettie Nissley 464-4123 for reservations. Plans are being finalized to attend the Spring Rally in Reading on May 12.

Lebanon Society 21

Lebanon Farm Women Society 21 held Sweethearts' night at the movies at the Valentine's banquet. It was held at the home of Millie Donmeyer. Co-hostess were Karen Grubb and Sherry Bashore. A delicious buffet-style meal was served followed by the showing of old homemade movies. Members and sweethearts had fun reminiscing of days gone by. Best wishes were sent to Terry and Kevin Skivey (who could not attend) because they had just given birth to dauther Alisson. Valentines from secret pals were exchanged.

The March meeting was held at the home of Janet Blatt. Business was conducted after playing the exciting game "Now you have it, now you don't."

The next meeting will be held at the home of Ruth Hostetter.

Berks Society 3

Berks Society of Farm Women Group 3 met at the home of Sonja Moyers for the March meeting. Dolores Kerschner showed how to make herbal creams and other herbal remedies.

Members collected money to donate to the March of Dimes.

The April meeting was at the home of Lelli Bucks with Terri Moore as the hostess. Members enjoyed visiting with friends and some members had a chance to quilt.

Some members attended the Spring Rally held at Riveredge Restaurante on May 12. The next meeting will be held at the home of Frances Moyer.

Lancaster Society 20

Lancaster Farm Women Society 20 met at the Memorial United Methodist Church, Quarryville, on Thursday April 2. A covered dish luncheon was held for Societies #15, #2, and county officers.

Helen Trout reproted two cards had been sent by the Sunshine committee and Freda Wimer of the sewing committee thanked members for making bibs for cancer patients. The president reminded the members that a luncheon is scheduled at the Kling House Restaurant in May.

Members enjoyed the program presented by Walter Bulsen, who showed slides of an African Safari in which he participated and elaborated on the habits of the different animals.

Milk Is Premier Sponsor of 'Soccer Mom Contest'

TOWSON, Md. – More than 450 youth soccer players nominated their moms for the "MD Soccer Mom Of The Year" contest, sponsored by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA), Wendy's Dannon Yogurt, and the Baltimore Indoor Soccer Team. The top 50 contest finalists and their kids were recognized during Milk Night at the Baltimore Spirit Soccer Arena, with the top 10 soccer moms being awarded prizes from MAMMA.

During Milk Night, MAMMA gave away more than 2,000 cups sporting the message "Drink Milk – 3 Glasses A Day!" to fans attending the game. After each Baltimore Spirit goal, Spirit team members threw out soccer balls with the "Drink Milk" message to the 4,000+ fans attending the game.

To nominate their mom for the contest, kids were asked to write an essay on "Why my mom is the best soccer mom."

Winning the grand prize of a trip to the 1998 World Club Playoffs in France, Christine Green's son from West River, Md., concluded his essay with this comment.

"Even if we don't win a prize, my mother has already kicked enough goals in my heart for a first place gold medal. That is why my mom is the best soccer mom!"

The second and third place winners were Lou Ann Beecher of Millersville, Md., and Diane Eagle of Eldersburg, Md. MAMMA presented each of the top three winners with a $50 gift certificate for dairy products from Giant Foods.

The MD Soccer Mom Of The Year Contest and Milk Night with the Baltimore Spirit are part of MAMMA's region-wide youth soccer campaign, created to encourage 1 million youth soccer players to drink more milk. MAMMA is the local checkoff-funded milk promotion and advertising association. MAMMA's goal is to increase dairy product demand by Mid-Atlantic consumers on behalf of more than 4,000 dairy farm families in southern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and northern Virginia.

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Eileen Murphy and Maryland Dairy Princess Emily O'Hara, along with That Milk Thing, congratulate MD Soccer Mom winners and families.

Now pay attention. Dad does not want a tie.

4-H HAPPENINGS

A meeting of the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club was held at Pleasant View Retirement Community on April 20, with six members, two leaders and several parents present.

A discussion of old business included a reminder of the county 4-H fair book cover contest. In other old business, the club service project was held on Saturday, April 4 at the Penn-Elm Lions Club Park in Elm. Despite the very cold, windy weather, five members, three leaders, parents and other family members worked with Lions Club members to scrape dried dead worms and old gum off the pavilion floor, dig turf around many trees, and pull weeds in order to shovel, scoop, and spread mulch around the trees, playground, and pavilion in the park. When the service work had ended, the club was treated to hot cocoa, fresh fruit, and homemade cupcakes which had been prepared by the parents of several 4-H members. Additionally, another 10 Community Club members had worked at a prior meeting to design and make posters to be used in club displays (also a part of community awareness)

Club members present at the April club meeting voted to hold an ice cream social at Pleasant View Retirement Community for the 4-H round-up event. 4-H members will be working at the May club meeting to put together multimedia presentations and demonstrations about the many projects the club offered during this club year Members plan to invite their family, friends, the residents of Pleasant View, and the public to this event

Following the demonstrations, 4-H members, family and friends plan to enjoy a "make your own sundae" ice cream social A vote will be taken at the next meeting as to the date/time of this event Members who would like to do a demonstration and/or who want to help plan the 1998 Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club Round up/Ice Cream Social need to be present at the May 18 meeting.

In new business, a vote was taken to choose the next Community Club service project. After several ideas and some discussion, members chose to give their service to Pleasant View Retirement Community. Several types of service were offered, including transporting residents to events within the complex, to help where there was a need, helping residents with crafts, volunteering at the Pleasant View Auxiliary Chicken Barbecue, or to provide a week of voluntary service. Cindy Stahl will be contacting Pleasant View about these possibilities and dates in which they may be available to the Community Club members.

In other new business it was announced that the last scheduled meeting of the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club before the club round up will be held on Monday, June 15, at 6:30 p.m. at Pleasant View Retirement Community. If you are a current member of the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club, the parents of one of our members, a kid age 7 to 17 or their parents, mark your calendars now! The June 15 meeting will be a planning meeting for next year's projects and club meetings and where the club meetings should be held. Projects for the 1998/99 club year are already being discussed.

Jason Landis gave a demonstration on his rocketry project from last year. He brought his project book and some of the materials need to complete this project. He also told us about the ill-fated launch of one of his rockets.

The meeting was adjourned to work on the county 4-H fair book cover contest entries. Jason Landis provided refreshments.

Stop by the June 15 club meeting or contact Cindy Stahl, Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club organizational leader, at (717) 664-2055 before June.

Four Teens Represent Delaware At National 4-H Conference

The theme of the 1998 National 4-H Conference was "network for action" and that's exactly what the four Delaware delegates did during this annual, mid-spring conference in Chevy Chase, Md.

"This was not a workshop or seminar, but a working conference," noted state 4-H program coordinator Joy Sparks. "Our delegates, representing the interests and concerns of all Delaware 4-H'ers, were part of teams formed to plan and implement change. These consulting groups were charged with brainstorming ideas for new programs and ways to improve existing ones, with the focus on bringing action back to the state."

Delaware delegates include Eddie Russell of Dover, Jamal Elliott of Wilmington, Jess Tatman of Felton, and Dawn Cannon of Greenwood. Russell and Elliott joined a school-to-work consulting group on how to better prepare 4-H'ers and all youths for the workforce. Tatman participated in a media action team to learn the most effective ways to get the word out about 4-H programs and services. Cannon was Delaware's representative to National Youth Directions Council, linking the conference back to states, assisting with networking and encouraging action at the county and state level.

"At the conference, our teen networked with more than 300 other delegates from every state and Puerto Rico," said Lisa Toccafondi, a New Castle County 4-H program associate who chaperoned the youths. "The picked up great ideas from each other and returned home with such enthusiasm."

And the networking continues today, via electronic networks.

Tips For Getting Kids To Help With Housework

OAKLAND PARK, KS. – Tom Schrader, founder of CottageCare, Inc., a nationwide residential cleaning service, thinks he's seen enough in his 20 years in the business to offer some tips about getting kids to help with housework. The Overland Park, Kansas-based company is a national franchise operating in 21 states and Canada.

"We've spoken so often to our customers about what works for them," says Schrader. "And over the years, we've picked up some tips from them about how they finally got the kids to help at home. Now, we'll often come in and give a homeowner a great cleaning job, then let them know what we've learned from other customers about keeping the place nice until the next visit."

Here are some of those tips:

1) Mats Matter:

You'd be amazed how much dirt a sturdy nylon mat will catch. Put one at each doorway. They are reasonably priced and can be found at any of the major discount superstores in the housewares department. Spend a little extra on a larger one to cover the area where kids enter the most. Teach them immediately that the first step in the house after school is where the dirt comes off...with their shoes.

2) Delegating Will Hurt You More Than It Hurts Them:

One of the main reasons Mom doesn't get enough help around the house, is because she wants things done her way. But, kids really like to help, and it's good for their self-esteem. Assign chores around age group. Let each child know that two or three jobs around the house belong to them. Things may not be done perfectly, but everybody wins.

3) Ages 8-12:

These kids are ready for some real chores. the last person in the shower in the morning (or in the bath in the evening) should be handed a spray-on bath cleaner. Steam helps loosen dirt, so once they're finished, show them how to spray tile in the shower. After they've brushed their teeth, they can quickly go over the tile with a sponge kept under the sink.

4) Ages 3-8:

Even at this tender age, it's not too early to develop routine and habits that could last a life time. When a child is through playing in a certain area, part of his/her routine should be to put his/her toys away. Make a game out of it. If Dad is handy, have him build some benches for the "rec" room that open to hold toys. Otherwise, large rubber bins are available at discount superstores in a variety of colors and models. Label them with stickers that are lively and that can show a child what goes where.

5) Does Clutter Make You Shudder?

Clutter is inevitable when kids are school age. They come home with some of the most amazing items. Rather than have feelings hurt by tossing out their precious schoolwork, go to your same discount superstore and buy under the bed storage boxes. Let the kids decide what schoolwork they'd like to save – special projects they are proud of – and have them save them in these boxes.

6) My Child, The Artist:

When kids bring home artwork, display the really good pieces on the refrigerator with colorful magnets. Decide what the lifespan will be for each picture – then if it should be saved in a box or not. When the little darlings use your walls for a canvas, use concentrated dish soap.

7) Make Family Time Chore Time:

Designate a time each week where the family can sit together in the kitchen or den and visit about what's happening at school, work, etc. Each person can be handling a task during the discussion such as polishing silver, folding laundry or organizing a drawer.

8) Don't Get Shocked:

A portable hairdryer really comes in handy for quick dust jobs like cobwebs. Teach the older kids these shortcuts, but remember to also teach them about safety with electric devices. This is a good time for them to learn these facts.

9) Hello Mr. Dustbuster:

Another great appliance that older kids can handle. With kids comes crumbs. Let them know right away that you do not want to find any evidence of their snacks around when you come home from work. Have large garbage cans lined with bags accessible in the kitchen. Leave an extra bag at the bottom so they can quickly replace it when garbage is full.

10)But Mom – But Nothing:

Let the kids know that their areas, bedrooms and bathrooms are their responsibility. Buy each one their own set of cleaning tools, and let them know they are to use them before any play time after school. Go to an office supply store and purchase desk trays and pencil holders to reduce clutter in their rooms. They trays can be marked "homework to be done" and "completed homework" to avoid morning panic over lost papers.

Getting Started With Mutual Funds

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Is one of your financial goals for 1998 to begin an investment program? No matter what you want to invest money for, it is important to educate yourself about investing. One of the most popular types of investments in recent years has been mutual funds.

Debra Bryant, certified financial planner, with Penn State Cooperative Extension will be teaching "Mutual Funds, The Basics & Beyhond" on consecutive Tuesdays, March 24 and 31. This workshop is for people who are interested in getting started in mutual funds as well as people wanting to know more about making money with mutual funds. It will be held at the Wayne County Courthouse from 7 to 9 p.m. each of these evenings. Pre-registration is required and the cost will be $5 per session.

Many people who are just getting started with investing have a small amount of money to invest and important goals they want to achieve. According to the Mutual Fund Investors Center people like mutual funds because they make it easy and less costly for them to satisfy their need for capital growth, income and/or income preservation. A mutual fund also allows small investors to have diversified investments and benefit from professional money management.

A mutual fund is a company that pools the money of many investors — its shareholders — to invest in a variety of different securities. Investments may be in stocks, bonds, money market securities or some combination of these. The investments are professionally managed by a mutual fund manager or team of managers. Each investor holds a pro rata share of the total portfolio entitled to any profits, but also subject to any losses in the portfolio, as well.

Mutual funds are not federally insured and your investment is not guaranteed like it is with bank CDs and passbook savings. You can lose money on these investments. Whether you lose or make money on mutual fund investments is dependent on the type of securities the mutual fund invests in, the movement of the financial markets, and the skill of the mutual fund manager. Despite the uncertainty in mutual fund investing, they are considered good investments for the beginning investor who wants to begin investing in the stock market.

For the individual investor, mutual funds provide the benefit of having someone else manage your investments, take care of recordkeeping for your account, and diversify your dollars over many different securities. Many funds have minimum investment amounts that are low enough for most people to be able to afford them.

To reduce your risk, it is important to diversify your investments (don't put all your money in one basket, but rather in several baskets). Mutual funds offer this diversity — their assets are invested in many different types of securities.

Five Key Principles For Mutual Fund Investors

The Mutual Fund Investors Center offers these five principles to help you become a successful mutual find investor:

• Don't pay for advice you don't need. Through direct-marketed mutual funds, millions of people have found that they don't have to pay for advice they don't need. By learning how to manage their own investments, they have the opportunity to reap all the benefits that mutual funds provide, including investment performance, wide selection of investments, superior customer service and the flexibility they need to reach their goals.

• Learn the basics before you begin. If you want to build an investment portfolio to achieve your goals throughout your lifetime, you'll need to learn the basics.

You should also want to refer to financial magazines or newspapers that feature articles on mutual funds or publish annual rankings of mutual fund performance. Contact the mutual fund companies to learn about their funds and services. All of them provide excellent educational materials, in addition to fund prospectuses and information kits. While they can't give investment advice, a call to their toll-free number puts you in touch with a person qualified to answer your questions or explain the various features of the funds they offer.

• Invest regularly — it's a good habit to get into. There are many advantages to maintaining a regular investment program in mutual funds. Keep in mind that the ability to reach long-term goals depends upon a long-term plan. A disciplined program of regular monthly investments in mutual funds provides an easy way to grow your investment over time, taking advantage of market cycles and ensuring that your investment program stays on track toward your goals, month in and month out.

• Diversify your investments. By spreading your investments over several different types of funds, you increase the chances of reaching your goals and increase your protection against investment risk. This book will show you how easy it is to diversify using direct-marketed mutual funds to build your portfolio.

• Be patient and give your investments time. There's no such thing as a sure thing, so avoid the tendency to follow performance hype and investment trends. By understanding mutual fund performance and balancing that with the need to reach long-term goals, you will be a much happier investor. Don't expect overnight results and don't expect stellar performance of any fund to continue forever. Rather, rely on good judgment in evaluating both the long- and short-term performance of a fund you select, and then give your investment time to grow.

The one bit of advice that most financial experts seem to agree upon when it comes to investing: Begin your investment program today. Begin small if necessary, but begin . . .

WHY BUSH HOG SQUEALERS MOW DOWN THE COMPETITION.

Each Bush Hog Squealer is equipped with Bush Hog's tough gearbox that carries a 2-year warranty. And, except for the 42-inch model, all Squealers feature oval-type blade pans. The 5 and 6-foot models have an "in line" shear pin with ball bearing protection that can be replaced in a snap. The cutter blade tips move faster for more efficient cutting. And Bush Hog quality is built into every unit. The Squealer's popularity is price. Because when you compare the price of these tough economy cutters to the competition, you'll find Squealers cut another important thing as well .. your costs. Choose from five cutting widths.

Maryland DHIA Report For April

The April Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top ten herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

Master Gardeners Get Governor's Conservation Award

NEWARK, Del. — New Castle County Master Gardeners group at the University of Delaware received the 1998 Governor's Urban Conservation Award.

The cooperative extension volunteer group was recognized for its contribution to public education in the areas of non-point source pollution, home waste reduction and schoolyard habitat projects that promote the use of native plants and make a place for wildlife.

At a recent ceremony on the campus of Delaware State University in Dover, Gov. Tom Carper presented the award to Al Rumaks, president of the NCC Master Gardeners. Jo Mercer, NCC extension educator for horticulture, and master Gardener Hetty Francke, and Dr. Pat Barber, associate dean for UD extension and outreach, were on hand for the presentation.

The governor gives conservation awards each year to individuals, businesses, volunteer groups, or agencies that provide for the beneficial conservation, protection, development and utilization of land water and other natural resources in Delaware.

NCC Master Gardners group was honored for participation in Appoquinimink and Pike Creek watershed projects, particularly for their "I Hate My Garden" workshop, which helped to increase awareness of Delaware's water quality problems. The workshop offered residents and business owners effective lawn-care strategies for maintaining a healthy lawn and protecting the state's natural resources.

Also mentioned in the award were the outreach programs in which NCC Master Gardeners have partnered with local elementary schools to establish butterfly and habitat gardens that use native plants.

"I'm thrilled that the Master Gardeners are getting recognition for all the volunteer work they do," said Mercer, who oversees the work of the more than 100 Master Gardeners in New Castle County. "They are dedicated and devote many hours each year to educating the public about conservation and water quality."

NFU Throws Weight Behind Ford's Plan To Help Tobacco Producers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) has thrown its weight behind a transition plan proposed by Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., to assist tobacco farmers harmed by the anticipated national tobacco settlement.

"Sen. Ford's plan allows Congress to achieve a fair settlement without destroying family farmers and other tobacco workers," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "Tobacco is an important cash crop for many family farmers. We cannot destroy their market and walk away."

In a letter delivered to each member of the U.S. Senate, recently, Swenson urged the senators to support Ford's proposal, the Long-Term Economic Assistance for Farmers Act. Highlights of the act include:

- Allocation of a portion of the industry settlement to help tobacco farmers and their dependents pay for higher education.
- Assistance to displaced workers within the tobacco processing and manufacturing operations.
- Compensation for farmers who lose tobacco quota as a result of reduced allotments under the settlement.
- Funding of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's administrative costs from tobacco settlement dollars, rather than from taxpayer dollars.
- Economic assistance, such as rural business enterprise funding and farm ownership loans, to communities hit by the settlement.

New Enzyme Treatment May Improve Dairy Producers' Profits

BROOKINGS, S D –Higher profits for dairy producers through reduced feed costs are possible by treating forages with enzymes, according to a study conducted by South Dakota State University dairy researcher, David J Schingoethe.

He reported on the effects of direct feeding a cellulase and xylanase enzyme mixture on forage digestibility at the American Dairy Science Association and American Society of Animal Science joint Midwest Section March 16-18 in Des Moines, Iowa. Schingoethe also reported on the enzyme study at the South Dakota Dairy-Forage Conference in Brookings March 4.

"Forages are our main source of energy for dairy cows and the cheapest source of energy," said Schingoethe. "If we can get the same milk production by feeding treated forages as with feeding grain, producers can enjoy higher returns.:

In short, cellulase and xylanase give cattle a head start on digestion, said Schingoethe. The two enzymes are currently found in the dairy cow rumen in small amounts and their function is to aid the digestion process Years ago, researchers found if they added these enzymes to silage, digestibility of forages was improved.

In Schingoethe's study, the cellulase and xylanase mixture was applied to the forage portion of a corn silage and alfalfa hay based ration at the time of feeding. Cows were fed one of five treatment diets for a 12-week period. Diets one through four were 55 percent forage and 45 percent concentrate Diets two through four were treated with enzymes Treatment levels varied from diet to diet. Diet five was an untreated control of 45 percent forage and 55 percent concentrate Within two to four weeks, milk production increased due to enzyme treatments in diets two through four and was similar to production of cows fed diet five, the high grain diet. This was maintained throughout the remainder of the experiment.

Schingoethe is conducting an experiment to determine the best time to start using the treatment, before calving, at the time of calving or after the cow achieves maximum milk production.

Elizabethtown Fair Billboard Contest For 4-H, FFA, And Youth Groups, Organizations

The Elizabethtown Fair has announced the second annual Billboard Contest for youth groups.

The Fair is offering $200 to the 4-H, FFA, or other youth group or organization that creates the top billboard to publicize the Elizabethtown Fair.

The Elizabethtown Fair will supply each participating group with two sheets of plywood to complete their project. Each group will be expected to create a sandwich board to publicize the Elizabethtown Fair using their imagination and paint, decorations, etc. of their choice.

Materials used must be able to endure weather. The message on the boards must include (1) The Elizabethtown Fair, (2) The dates of the fair, and (3) the location of the fair.

The completed boards are to be placed along a busy road, in someone's yard, farm, or place of business, with the owner's permission and must be readable from the road. The boards will be judged for creativity, neatness, location and the message given.

Registration forms may be obtained by calling (717) 426-2940 or (717) 361-9016. All registrations must be postmarked by June 15 to the Elizabethtown Fair, P.O. Box 285, Elizabethtown, PA 17022. All billboards must be in place by July 21. To be judged, a picture of the sandwich board must be submitted by Aug. 1. The group or organization's name, address and phone number and location of the billboard are to appear on the back of the submitted photograph. First place billboard will be awarded $200, second place $100, and third place $50.

Bringing Temperatures Down

Keeps Dairy Production Up

DES MOINES, Iowa — Keeping dairy cows from overheating during hot weather is a key to maintaining production levels and reproduction, a dairy expert from Kansas State University said.

"Heat stress can cause losses in production of 20 percent or more and reduce conception rates from 10 to 20 percent," said John Smith an extension dairy specialist. Producers need to look for ways to reduce that stress without adding significant costs to production, he said.

Dairy experts agree that heat stress for dairy cows begins to take its toll when the temperature/humidity index reaches 72 degrees. "The severity and duration of the heat stress is going to depend on local conditions. In some areas, heat stress is almost never a concern, and in others, it's nearly constant," Smith said. "That means the steps taken to reduce heat stress will be different on every farm."

In a presentation to researchers and extension specialists at the joint Midwest meeting of the American Dairy Science Association and the American Society of Animal Science in Des Moines, March 17, Smith outlines key strategies for reducing heat stress. He recommends adopting the recommendations in the order they're listed here. Each step to reducing heat stress comes with a cost, he notes, so producers need to carefully consider whether the benefits will justify the expense.

•First, provide adequate cool, clean water Smith said providing enough water for cows as they leave the milking parlor and in housing will go a long way toward keeping cows cool. Cows rely on evaporation of moisture from the respiratory tract and from sweating for cooling. In dehydrated cows, this natural cooling system is crippled.

• Second, find ways to reduce walking distance to the milking parlor. Minimizing effort helps cows keep their cool, Smith explained. And minimize time cows spend in the milking parlor's holding pen. "Those cows are like a bunch of large furnaces in a small room with no place for the heat to go," he said.

•Next, provide shade in the holding pen and in cow housing. Keeping the sun off cows can dramatically reduce temperature.

• Provide a holding pen cooling system and exit lane cooling. Smith noted that the holding pen and parlor are relatively harsh environments because of the amount of heat generated in that small space. Although fans and sprayers are expensive, keeping cows cool in the holding pen and cooling them rapidly as they leave the milking parlor may reduce stress enough to make those systems pay, he said.

• Finally, provide cooling systems in cow housing areas and along feedlines. Although this is the most expensive option for cooling cows, it may be necessary to keep cows producing at optimum levels.

Keystone Junior Beef Classic May 23 - 24

BUTLER (Butler Co.) — The Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic is scheduled for the Butler Fairgrounds on Memorial Day weekend, May 23 - 24. This will be the 13th year for the all-breed steer and heifer show that has drawn cattle and exhibitors from five states.

It gives youth under 21 years of age an opportunity to enter competition drawn from a larger area than usually seen at the county fairs in which they compete during the summer.

Exhibitors do not have to be 4-H or FFA members to participate. A friendly, helpful atmosphere makes this the perfect preview show for beginning showmen.

There are already 73 steers and 50 heifers entered in the 1998 contest and late entries will be accepted until 8:30 a.m. on show day. Exhibitors are reminded that all animals must be accompanied with proper health charts indicating freedom from disease and proper vaccinations as set forth by the regional Pennsylvania Department of Animal Industry.

The three-day Memorial Day weekend allows Monday for rest and recuperation, since the open cattle show is scheduled on Sunday. For the first time this year the Pennsylvania Junior Polled Hereford Association will hold their spring show in conjunction with the Classic. Their show is slated for 1 p.m. Saturday. Following that, the always popular Classic Showmanship Contest will get under way.

An educational program on Quality Assurance will also be offered Saturday afternoon, followed by a pizza party. Also new for 1998 is a trade show featuring businesses that help sponsor the show. Trade show exhibits will be open both days.

Sunday brings the real excitement when the steer and breeding classes are judged. In the heifer show, premiums will be paid for all classes and trophies will be awarded for grand champion, reserve champion, and bred and owned. Registered heifers will show by breed and commercial classes will be held for unregistered heifers. A prize of $200 will be awarded to the supreme champion heifer of the show.

The popular county steer classes will again be offered for any county (from any state) that has five or more preregistered steers. County winners will win a jackpot of $10 times the number of steers shown in the class. Clubs and co. groups coordinate plans for the group to participate, and someone from each county wins the jackpot. So far, seven counties have enough entries for a county steer class. They are Beaver, Butler, Lawrence, Crawford, Venango, Mercer, and Indiana. There is also an all others division, for those not having enough entries for a county class. The county champions will then compete with the all others champion for grand champion steer with a prize of $250 and reserve champion steer with a prize of $100.

Entry forms have been mailed to past participants. For more information or entry forms, contact your county extension agent or Beth Wingard, show secretary, (814) 782-3992, or write Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic c/o Bob Calvert, Mercer County Extension Office, P.O. Box 530, Mercer, PA 16137.

AHI Announces Action Plan to Address Antibiotic Use

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The Animal Health Institute, a U.S. trade association representing manufacturers of animal health products, has announced an action plan to address the complex issue of antibiotic use in animals.

"AHI is committed to a multi-pronged strategy that will simultaneously assess any possible risk of antibiotic use in animals and assure that these drugs are used prudently by those charged with the health and well-being of animals." said Alexander S. Matthews, AHI president and CEO. "We share the concerns of the human medical community that overuse of these important medicines can lead to resistance."

AHI's approach is based on working in concert with government agencies, the Food and Drug Administration and United States Department of Agriculture, who have oversight for the regulation of animal health care products and monitor resistance. AHI's plan to reduce the potential for resistance in humans and assure the availability of animal antibiotics combines several elements including:

- An independent assessment to examine the benefits and relative risk to people of treating animals with antibiotics.
- Development of guidelines for the prudent use of antibiotics in farm animals
- Support for improved surveillance and monitoring of how animal antibiotics are used.

Matthews stated that the approach demonstrates that the animal health industry shares the concern of public health officials that the inappropriate use of antibiotics whether on the farm, in hospitals, or by physicians can contribute to the increase of antibiotic resistant bacteria

In addition, an information kit explaining the issue has been developed and is composed of the following documents

- Backgrounder on antibiotic use in farm animals
- Fact sheets on two common foodborne bacteria - salmonella and campylobacter
- Summary of research conducted in the past 40 years
- Fast facts and answers to commonly asked questions
- Information on the process of antibiotic approval
- Sample labeled indications for antibiotics.

The kit can be obtained through the internet at www.ahi.org/info/general/antibiotics.htm or send a fax request to (703) 684-0125 to receive a mailed copy.

Case Acquires Leading Agricultural Sprayer, Applicator Manufacturer

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation announced that an agreement has been reached to acquire Tyler Industries, designer and manufacturer of chemical and fertilizer sprayers and applicators. The new line expands and strengthens the Case IH equipment line for large-scale production agriculture and precision farming.

"This acquisition enables Case to offer another solution for farmers," said Jon Carlson, Case senior vice president and general manager, North American agricultural equipment business. "More large farmers are moving toward ownership of self-propelled spray units. With the addition of Tyler sprayers and applicators, Case will better be able to supply farmers with equipment, services, and data for use throughout crop production cycles."

Tyler manufactures an entire range of self-propelled agricultural sprayers, from high clearance sprayers used by custom applicators and farmers primarily during the growing season to large floater units used for commercial and custom applications after harvest or before planting.

The recent acquisition of Tyler Industries expands the crop production services Case Corporation will offer to its customers. Tyler manufactures five self-propelled sprayer models, including the Tyler Patriot 150 high clearance sprayer pictured here. Tyler also manufactures floater fertilizer applicators.

"Management of inputs, including chemicals and fertilizers, is an increasingly important component in the crop production cycle," said John Garrison, general manager, Case IH agricultural systems. "Farmers' input costs are rising through use of genetically improved seeds and specialty chemicals, and as a result, they are using every tool available to ensure the success of their crops. Adding sprayers and applicators for chemicals and fertilizers to our line enables Case to design systems to meet more of its customers' needs. It also creates another opportunity for farmers to use and apply data gathered through Case IH Advanced Farming Systems (AFS)." The Tyler acquisition follows the 1997 purchase by Case of Gem Sprayers Limited of Lincoln, England. "We want to provide the best sprayer technology for our customers and we now have both a strong North American and strong European technology base to draw from," Garrison said.

A privately owned firm, Tyler Industries had sales of approximately $66 million last year. Company operations are based in Benson, Minn. and the majority of sales come from North America, but the firm also has a strong market postion in Argentina and distributors in the United Kingdom, Germany, and Netherlands. Terms of the acquisition agreement were not disclosed.

Axiom Herbicide Registered For Grass Control

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Corn and soybean growers will have a new, low-rate preemergence grass herbicide for use this spring.

Axiom herbicide from Bayer Corporation has been federally registered by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Extensive university research shows that Axiom consistently provides excellent residual control of annual grasses, such as the three major foxtail species and fall panicum, and key small-seeded broadleaf weeds, including pigweed, waterhemp, and common lambsquarters. Axiom is the only preemergence grass herbicide formulated as a low-rate, dry flowable product. It is effective when applied at one-fourth to one-half the use rates of similar products.

Axiom is a combination of two active ingredients with separate modes of action. The first is a new oxyacetamide chemistry that works by interfering with germination and seedling development by inhibiting protein synthesis. The second is proven herbicide chemistry from Bayer that disrupts the photosynthetic process of weeds.

Axiom can be applied early preplant, preplant surface, preplant incorporated, preemergence or burndown, in single or split applications. Growers can apply Axiom with liquid or dry fertilizer, and they can tank-mix Axiom with most registered herbicides to address specific grass and weed problems. Axiom is gentle on corn and soybean crops, workers, and the environment.

"Growers look for consistent performance, long-residual, broad-spectrum control, crop safety, low use rates, and convenient handling," said Inci Dannenberg, marketing product manager for Bayer. "Axiom has all of these features. It is easy to use and has good environmental characteristics."

Trio Of Pa. Men Trained in Vermont

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Will Godwin of Chambersburg, Dan Rice from Ephrata, and Tom Roe of Troy recently returned from an intensive week-long training session in Solar Barns technology held here.

Solar Barn dealers from several other large dairy-producing states joined the Pennsylvania delegates for classroom training on topics that ranged from barn layouts to the tensile strength of steel. Trainees visited farms in New Hampshire and Vermont to hear directly from farmers about the effectiveness of Solar Barns.

Godwin, Rice, and Roe learned that farmers are drawn to Solar Barns because of their light airy interiors. The excellent light and superior ventilation combine to enhance herd health and increase production. Farmers are also favorably impressed with the affordability of Solar Barns.

All the Pennsylvania men were enthusiastic about how the greenhouse-type barn has evolved into high quality livestock housing.

Claas KgaA, based in Harsewinkel, Germany, manufactures and distributes combines, balers, forage harvesters, hay mowers, and other agricultural machinery worldwide. The company's profits were marked at $134.7 million DM and its turnover percentage increased a record 30.5 percent in fiscal 1997 (ending September 30, 1997), well above the industry average. In addition, employment at Claas rose 15 percent worldwide and now stands at 5,570.

Claas of America, the company's North American operations based in Columbus, Ind. also observed a successful year in 1997, setting a new company record in profitability.

According to Roger Parker, director of operations, "Profitability in North America continues to insure the stability of operations. We feel confident that efforts will continue to move the company in a positive direction."

In addition, Claas of America saw significant increases in both the self-propelled forage harvester and hay equipment business. As a result, the company will move the final assembly of all Claas hay products to its Columbus facility in 1998.

Fairs Are For Everyone!

The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs has been in existence since 1912 and was formed to promote the growth and improvement of Agricultural Fairs, Associations and Societies within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

That first year there were Thirteen members and we have steadily grown to our current membership of One-hundred and Twelve. Each Agricultural Fair, Association or Society has at its focal point the education and showcase of agriculture, horticulture, etc. and over Seven million fairgoers each year can attest to the quality of what we have to offer.

At Fairs exhibitors compete for prize money, ribbons, or merely enjoy the competition. The following are only samples in which there is competition - livestock, hay & grain, vegetables, fruits, & nuts, baked and canned goods, flowers, sewing, art, grange exhibits, contests, and others. This can involve both young and old alike! Contact Fairs of your interest to see what areas of competition are available.

For further information you can - contact any Fair; write to PA State Association of County Fairs, P.O. Box 546, Gratz, PA 17030; visit us on the web at: www.pafairs.org or e-mail us at: PSACF@pafairs.org

Local Youth Receives Cargill Scholarship

SPRING MILLS (Centre Co.)– Christyn Rossman, a 1998 graduate of Penns Valley Junior/Senior High, has been awarded a $1,000 college scholarship by Cargill. Christyn is the daughter of Barb Rossman of Spring Mills.

Christyn plans to study international business at Penn State.

The scholarship is one of 250 awarded by Cargill to 1998 high school graduates from U.S. farm families in 46 states. This year's scholarship program, in its 13th year, attracted 2,432 applicants.

The $250,000 Cargill Scholarship Program for Rural America is designed to recognize and encourage the academic achievement, accomplishments and talents of young people from farm families throughout the United States.

Minnesota Researchers Look For Clues To Improved Breeding In Pigs

DES MOINES, Iowa — A better understanding of how the local immune system keeps the uterus clean in pigs may lead to improved artificial insemination strategies, according to a University of Minnesota researcher.

Previous studies have shown in horses, immune cell migration into the uterus following breeding removes excess sperm and bacterial contaminants to ensure a friendly environment for embryos. When mares failed to remove this "inflamation" before embryo descent fertility was reduced.

University of Minnesota researcher Kevin Rozeboom may have found a similar occurrence in sows. In his study, sustained levels of those same immune cells occurred long after insemination and may create a potentially hostile environment for eggs, sperm and embryos, when the last of multiple artificial inseminations is performed during late estrus.

Rozeboom notes that mares and sows are the only two domesticated animals where sperm is released directly into the uterus and doesn't need to pass through a cervix. And when artificial insemination is used on sows, it's often done several times during estrus, instead of just once as in cattle. That's because the onset of ustrus in pigs doesn't accurately predict the exact time of ovulation. So multiple inseminations improve the odds of fertilization and a larger litter of pigs.

Rozeboom and University of Minnesota researchers Bo Crabo and Mats Troedsson found that after insemination, the level of certain immune cells called polymorphonuclear neutrophil (PMN) cells, increases dramatically in the uterus of pigs. In fact 95 percent of all the cells they flushed from the sow uteruses after breeding were PMN cells. "Those are cells that engulf and clean up contaminants that are introduced into the uterus," Rozeboom said.

Rozeboom found that when semen was introduced into the uterus, PMN levels began to rise within 6 hours and peaker at about 12 hours. Those peak levels were sustained for another 12 hours before they began to decline. In other words, an inflamatory response in the form of PMN migration into the uterus appears to normally occur following breeding.

Unfortunately, when producers unintentionally perform artificial insemination during late estrus or just after estrus, the sustaining PMN numbers coinciding with a decreasing uterine movement may have a negative effect on fertility. Why? Because embryos enter the uterine horn quickly after fertilization (within two to three days after ovulation) and because high levels of PMN cells remain in the uterus where they may directly or indirectly effect sperm and embryo survival, Rozeboom suggests.

Rozeboom presented his research to scientists gathered in Des Moines for the joint Midwest meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association March 16-18. His research earned the National Pork Producer's Council Innovation Award for basic research.

His findings appear to confirm earlier studies that showed an insemination at the very end of estrus often cancels any advantages gained by multiple inseminations during estrus.

More than 40 percent of sows in the United States are bred by artificial insemination and in some areas more than 80 percent are bred by artificial insemination.

"Artificial insemination can be just as good as natural insemination," Rozeboom said. "But there are so many more procedures involved and a mistake in one can lead to serious problems."

Rozeboom said additional study is needed to determine the effect of the immune response on embryos and exactly how the response is triggered. Once those questions are answered, more efficient precise breeding programs could be developed to minimize the immune response.

His research is supported by the Minnesota Pork Producers Association.

No Till System Sets New Standards

ATLANTA, Ga.– No Till seeding is even faster and more accurate with the new Tye 2000 No Till System from AGCO.

New production-enhancing features are combined with the proven four-step seeding system to create a drill system that meets no till productivity needs.

"We know our farm customers have no time to spare when it comes to putting in their crops," said Andy Anderson, Tye marketing manager. "They have also told us that capacity has to be matched with accuracy. Our new 2000 no tills set new standards in both of these areas. Operators will also be safer with our standard operator convenience package that includes a double width folding walkboard, steps, handholds, lights, flashers, and safety chains."

For the capacity side of the equation, Tye engineers have designed a grain box that holds more, fills faster, and protects the seed better. The new design features a 2.8 bushel per foot grain box for greater fill volume and fewer stops to refill. The new 14-inch wide fill opening allows faster fills, while the narrow 2-3/4-inch box bottom with seed shedders ensures complete feeding and fast and easy cleanout. The latch-free lid means less hassle at fill, while the rainguard design keeps seed safe and dry.

Single down pressure spring and smooth-sided E-Z Adjust presswheels have been added to the 2000 No Till System. The 40 pounds per inch spring down pressure with single turnbuckle adjusters assures uniform down pressure for optimum depth control while the E-Z Adjust presswheels fine tune depth control to enhance positive soil/seed contact.

Addition of the ADC 2000 Automatic Depth Control option makes depth control adjustment and seed placement even easier and more accurate. The ADC 2000 automatically adjusts coulter depth to changes in the field surface, ensuring consistent seed placement, and uniform seed depth.

Field records and operator efficiency are enhanced with the addition of the new electronic acre meter and optional programmable electronic drill monitor. Quickly and easily installed, the monitor records acreage of individual fields and total acres, and monitors seeder shaft rotation and seed bin levels.

76 Cow Total Ventilation System - Denver, PA

Lapp's Barn Equipment can install a high-performance/high efficiency tunnel ventilation system in your barn. A tunnel ventilation system will give you an even air flow throughout your barn of 2-5 mph. This gives you the advantage of better controlling temperature to give your cows more comfort which means more milk!! Also, a tunnel ventilation system eliminates circulating fans, provides summer and winter ventilation and controls fly problems! An optional unit can even automate your ventilation so you will never even have to worry about it when you're not there, so you can concentrate on other things!

At Lapp's, we sell high quality ventilation systems manufactured by Acme Engineering, Acme products feature such things as:

- Galvanized Construction
- Wide Cambered Propeller
- Rivited Blades
- Unique Captured Bearings
- Vertical Support Frame
- Screens Pre-cut
- Totally Enclosed Motors
- Optional Discharge Diffuser Cone
- Optional Belt Tightener

"ATTENTION DAIRYMEN"

Sprung Farms of Bergen, NY and J. Elvin Glick of Quarryville, PA have been supplying area dairymen with high quality forages for years, so we would like to introduce a new type of service, "Alfalfa Balage" "Alfalfa Balage" has been around for a time now and has proven to make a great source of feed providing that the farmer gets what he pays for To help resolve this problem we would like to introduce an "on your farm service" which would include fresh baled alfalfa in easy to use 4' or 5' round bales. 1. Delivered immediately after baling, unwrapped for total inspection of quality and pureness of product, 2. After total satisfaction has been determined, a wrapping service by one of our local area farmers would take place at any site desired by buyer, 3. We can also offer two kinds of wrapping service, either single bale, individually or tube type by state of the art new wrappers.
Because we are so sure that our product and service is second to none, we can also offer a term type payment schedule with no interest to help spread out puchase to help with cash flow. If this offer interests you please call us to talk more about this and possibly we can arrange a personal meeting.
We also still carry our full line of small square bales of hay:
1. Alfalfa 3. Bedding
2. Timothy/Alfalfa 4. Western Hay
We also have single bale individually wrapped balage available. Any size load is available.

The Effects Of The Asian Financial Crisis On U.S. Poultry Exports

Late last year the economies of many countries in southeast Asia collapsed. Indonesia has fallen the furthest, but South Korea, Thailand, the Phillipines, Vietnam, and Malaysia have also seen serious reversals in their growth. The other countries of the region have had spill-over effects because of their trade with these countries. As a result, in the last nine months the currencies of all of the east Asian countries except China and Hong Kong have declined compared to the U.S. dollar. Indonesia's rupiah is only 26% of its former rate, meaning that anything Indonesia buys from the United States is four times as expensive as it was last May. In addition the incomes of the citizens have fallen in this period, making imported goods proportionately even more expensive The other countries have not declined to this degree, but the price of U.S. products for all of them has increased over the period, in many cases by more than 50%.

How important are these countries as markets of our poultry products? The answer is pretty important, especially when potential is considered. The east Asian countries in total bought 27% of the broilers, 59% of the mature chickens, 31% of the turkeys, and 41% of the eggs that the U.S. exported in the first eight months of 1997. Hong Kong, Japan, and China were the 2nd, 5th, and 6th largest broiler customers during this period, and Hong Kong, Japan, and Korea were in the top 10 for mature chickens, turkeys, and eggs.

The true importance of these countries was always their potential. As a group the east Asian economies had large populations, high economic growth, and an increase in meat consumption in their diets. Unlike the countries of the former Soviet Union, these countries had money to spend and the prospect of continued rapid growth in their purchases. The increased purchases of corn by these countries in 1995-96 in the face of much higher prices played a major part in the high feed prices of that period. Asia was always mentioned as the largest growth area for U.S. food and agricultural exports. Furthermore, the cuisines of most of these countries is amenable to the use of dark meat, which helps buoy the price for products that can be harder to sell to Americans.

A major question is whether the economic reversals of these countries is a minor or a major setback. It is somewhat uncertain, but in some cases these economies have serious problems. Many have a lot of U.S. dollar denominated debt, that has grown in real terms by at least 50% because of the drop in their currencies. The World Bank is working out plans with them, but paying the interest and principal of this debt is going to be much more difficult than was imagined when it was incurred.

Fortunately for the industry, only Korea is both a major customer and in serious difficulties. Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, and Singapore have withstood the collapse fairly well. These countries all have higher standards of living than the rest of east Asia so that food represents a smaller portion of the income of the average citizen. This should make demand for imported poultry products more recession proof than in the less developed countries.

Nevertheless, the effects of the crisis are already clear in the export statistics. For chicken parts, east Asia as a whole represented 33% of U.S. exports in 1996 and 28% in 1997 and exports to the region overall declined by 12% in 1997, from 1.45 bil. pounds to 1.28 bil. pounds. All of our major customers in the region purchased at least 13% less in 1997 and Korean purchases were down 37%. Since the economic problems of these countries arose after mid-year, further declines may yet occur.

While east Asia will continue to be a major customer for U.S. poultry products, the potential for rapid growth in exports to the region seems to be gone for now. Although, in the long run, the region is still promising, it may be several years before the region can recover from their current economic problems and resume their growth.

For Garey, Farming And Conservation Go Hand In Hand

NEWARK, Del. — Standing in the middle of a soybean field, one of 1,900 acres that he farms, Bob Garey pulls a penknife out of his pocket and turns up a handful of rich, dark soil.

Nothing has been planted here yet, on this cold mid-March day, but the soil is full of life — earthworms wiggle just inches below the surface.

"Here, take a look at this," said the Felton farmer, as he sifts the dirt through his fingers. "You can't do this in the field across the street; you'd get big clods and lumps."

Garey's field — unlike the other one he refers to — has not been tilled. Remnants of last year's crop litter the ground as far as the eye can see.

On most of his acreage, Garey has adopted no-till farming, a practice that helps prevent erosion of the topsoil and improves its organic content — just ask the earthworms. Not only does no-till produce favorable growing conditions, it's good for the environment, too. Less erosion of the soil means less chance for runoff of pesticides and fertilizers into streams and other waterways.

Like countless other Delaware farmers, Garey sees himself as a steward of the land. He considers it his moral imperative to leave the land as good as he found it, or even better.

"We are doing everything we can to make farming environmentally friendly," noted Garey.

Notill farming is not a brand-new concept, it's been used since the 1960s. However, to maximize yields, techniques are constantly being refined and improved. So for the latest information on no-till and a variety of other conservation practices, Garey arms himself with knowledge; his sources range from neighborhood farmers to computer databases.

Garey is quick to note that a key resource is the University of Delaware.

He stays in frequent contact with his extension agent, Gordon Johnson, and many other extension and university staffers, including integrated pest management specialist Joanne Whalen, plant pathologist Bob Mulrooney, and agronomic specialist Richard Taylor.

"We lean on the university," said this 4th-generation farmer. "We look to the university for training, we turn to them for nutrient management knowledge, and almost anytime we have a problem."

Yet despite the rich network of university support and other resources that Garey has developed, he knows full well that the success or failure of his 1,900-acre operation rests squarely on his shoulders.

Gary Farms is strictly a family business. Garey, his wife Linda, and their sons, Rob and Alan, along with nephew Terry Morris, do it all — from crop planning and equipment maintenance to planting and harvesting.

Anyone who has a romanticized view of farming as an idyllic, stress-free existence need only look at Garey's lifestyle to see the reality.

On the day that Garey gave a tour of his farm, he was up at 4 a.m., poring over research proposals submitted to the Delaware Soybean Board, of which Garey is treasurer. The soybean board is just one of more than a half-dozen agricultural organizations and committees that Garey is actively involved in.

Later, that March day, he made the short trip into town for an informal breakfast meeting with area farmers; this is how he stays abreast of planting conditions and other news. Then, as in usual in the winter months, he returned to his home office for an 8-hour session of research, planning and paperwork.

Despite plenty of 12-hour summer days on a combine, Garey estimates that he only spends 30 percent of his time out in the fields. The majority of his work is done in his office, which involves everything from seed selection to getting on the computer and checking out the commodities boards, so he can market his crops better. Computer databases and spreadsheets — the ubiquitous tools of the urban wage earner — also are the modern-day farmer's tools.

"You're always juggling all these different balls," said Garey. "Even when you manage them all successfully, it can go downhill so fast because profit margins are slim. All it takes is a little bad weather."

Despite the trials and challenges Garey faces as a farmer, he can't imagine doing anything else. He takes his care of the land seriously and is determined to keep agriculture environmentally friendly and economically viable in Delaware.

There's also no doubt that Garey reaps great fulfillment from what he does. He wants to leave a legacy for the two small children who may yet become the sixth generation of Garey farmers — Rob's 6-year-old daughter and 1-year-old son.

"Farming is a crazy business; but you have to love it," said Garey. While gazing out at the fallow fields that soon would be sprouting new life, Garey said, "Nothing matches the satisfaction of going out in a combine and harvesting a beautiful crop."

Brown Receives New York Farmers Club Award

NEW YORK, N.Y. — At a black tie dinner on April 14, Susan Brown was honored with the Outstanding Research Award of the New York Farmers Club.

The presentation took place at the Union Club in New York City.

Brown, who directs Cornell University's apple breeding program in the Department of Horticultural Sciences at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y., was accompanied by Daryl B. Lund, who is the Ronald P. Lynch Dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. The annual affair was held by the Farmers Club, an organization founded in 1882.

The Outstanding Research Award is rotated among the College of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Cook College of Rutgers University, the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Connecticut, and the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

"Dr. Brown was very gracious in receiving the Outstanding Research medal and identified how important the Farmers Club's contributions aer for student support at CALS," said Dean Lund. Most of the contributions from the club received by Cornell are used for student support. The Farmers Club makes contributions annually to the above colleges and to the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Massachusetts to support the highest priorities recognized by the deans.

Brown was honored for her research in the area of apple breeding and for her use of both traditional and molecular research techniques. The award was also recognition of the importance of new apple varieties to New York farmers. Dean Lund remarked that he nominated Brown with the full concurrence of Station Director Jim Hunter.

"This award was a very appropriate way to recognize Dr. Brown's contributions during her relatively short time here at Cornell," he said. "She joined the University in 1985, but she has been very significant in moving the apple breeding program and keeping it at the highest level, both nationally and internationally."

Geneva Horticulture Sciences Department Chair Hugh Price agreed. "Under Dr. Brown's leadership, the Cornell apple breeding program continues to be the premier program in North America," he said. "Eating quality, both at harvest and after long term storage, is a major objective. The integration of genetic studies and biotechnology with conventional breeding is an on-going process that Dr. Brown is using to develop the next generation of apple varieties for New York."

In addition to traditional breeding for taste quality, projects in Brown's program include screening seedlings for the malic acid gene, the lack of which produces bland apples; disease resistance through transformation; using DNA markers to select for the Wijik character, which allows high density planting; and market-assisted selection for scab resistance.

"Dr. Brown's excellent rapport with colleagues, students and visiting scientists is a wonderful tribute to her and to her scientific achievements," said Price. "Cornell University is fortunate to have such capable leadership for this important plant breeding program."
